Lineage.—The house of Maes-y Neuadd, a younger branch of the Wynns of Glynn, represented in the male line by the Wynnes of Peniarth, deduces descent from Osborn Fitzgerald, a scion of the great Irish house of Desmond, who, emigrating from Ireland, obtained extensive possessions in Merionethshire, including the site of the present mansion of Cors-y-Gedol. Fourth in descent from Osborn was,

Einion ap Griffith, of Cors-y-Gedol, co. Merioneth, whose name appears in a list of the Indicatores (probably the grand jury) of his county, for a period commencing 7 July, 1382, and extending certainly not beyond 21 June, 1386; we also find among the Exchequer Issues for the tenth year of Richard II a payment recorded to Einion ap Griffith and others, captains of certain archers from the co. of Merioneth. Einion ap Griffith's second son,

Ievan ap Einion, one of the Barons of Edeirnion, co. Merioneth, who appears as one of the Jurors in an Inquisition held at Bala, in Merioneth, 6 Oct. 1427, before Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, and d. before 4 Henry VII, 1439, was grandfather of tribe of North Wales and Powys, enjoyed the hereditary office of bearing his sovereign's crown, and putting it on the monarch's head, after the ceremony of anointment had been performed by the bishop of Bangor. He is said to have resided at Presaddfed, in Anglesey, and the lordships he possessed are recorded in the extent of North Wales, as divided among his five sons. These sons were, I. Methusalem; II. Cyfnerth; III. Ievan; IV. Iorwerth; V. Blettrws. From the eldest son derived,

Griffith (who lived temp. Llewelyn ap Griffith ap Llewelyn, Prince of North Wales) ap Iorwerth ap Methusalem, who m. Gwenllian, dau. of Ririd Vlaidd, Lord of Penllyn, and had issue: his second son,

Sir Howel-y-Pedolau, was a prominent character in his time. His mother nursed Edward of Caernarvon, and Sir Howel being thus his foster-brother, was greatly esteemed by that unfortunate monarch, and knighted by him. He is reported to have possessed such strength, that he could straighten horse-shoes: hence his surname, "y Pedolau." From this knight derived, eighth in descent,

This family derives maternally from the very eminent Cambrian house of Nanney of Nannau, a scion of the royal dynasty of Powys.

Richard Nanney, of Cefndeuddwr, co. Merioneth (son of Howel Nannau, of Nannau, co. BRIGADIER-GEN. JAMES-GEORGE SMITH-NEILL, a soldier whose name will live in history. Brigadier-Gen. Neill was b. 26 May, 1810. His boyhood was passed in Ayr, at the academy of which town he received his education, completing it finally at the College of Glasgow. He went to India at the age of 16, and joined the 1st Madras European fusiliers in 1826. His energetic talents soon attracted attention, and at the early age of 17, he was appointed fort-adjutant of Masulapatam. When his regt. was ordered to Kamptee, he accompanied it, and became successively quartermaster and adjutant of it; in both these capacities he repeatedly received the thanks of his commanding officers. Ten years of unremitting and zealous work in that trying climate told on his health, and he was recommended a return to his native country; but the news of the Cabul expedition tempted him to forego the remaining year of his leave, and to at once go back to India, when he took the earliest and every opportunity of volunteering to serve in Affghanistan, but his offers were not accepted. In 1841, he was (unsolicited) appointed assistant adjutant-gen. of the ceded districts, and filled that post until the second Burmese war, in which he earned marked distinction under Lord Dalhousie. On the outbreak of the struggle with Russia in 1854, Neill volunteered for active service in Turkey, and displayed considerable ability while in command of the Turkish contingent until the close of that war. Returning then to India, he took the command of the 1st Madras European fusiliers, and on the occurrence of the atrocious Sepoy mutiny, led his regt. to the relief of Benares, the victory of Allahabad, and the capture of Cawnpore, and was the first to stem the tide of the rebellion. His whole progress was a series of brilliant actions, and while in sole command of Cawnpore, his signal punishment of the high caste murderous Brahmins, and his salutary strictness, effected the restoration of order. He led a brigade from Cawnpore to the relief of Lucknow, and here, at the carrying of the batteries at the point of the bayonet, on the 25 Sept. 1857, in the very moment of complete success, "fell"—to use the words of the Bombay Times—"the gallant General Neill, the pride and idol of the army." The news of his fame and his death made a great sensation in England, and the Queen, at once, raised his widow to the rank which would have been hers had her husband lived to receive the Knight Commandership of the Bath designed for him. The E.I.C. has also conferred on the widow a grant of £500 a-year. This lady who is now, therefore, Lady Neill, was m. to Gen. Neill in 1835. She is Isabella, dau. of Col. William Wards, of the 5th Bengal native cavalry, granddau. of Gen. George Wards, of Woodlands Castle, Glamorganshire, and great-grand-niece of the eminent commander, Charles, 1st Marquess Cornwallis. Gen. Neill by his marriage with this lady, leaves issue,

IV. Andrew-Harry-Spencer.
V. Harrison-Francis-Spencer.

III. Elizabeth-Catherine.

A statue of Gen. Neill, in honour and memory of his great services, has been erected by public subscription, in Wellington Square, in the town of Ayr. Its inauguration took place 11 Oct. 1859, in the presence of an immense assemblage, among whom were Sir James Ferguson, Viscount Ingestre, the Earl of Eglinton, and most of the neighbouring gentry and some of the late gallant general's companions in arms in India. The statue bears the following inscription, "James-George Smith-Neill, C.B., aide-de-camp to the Queen, lieut.-col. in the Madras army, brigadier-gen. in India, a brave, resolute, self-reliant soldier, universally acknowledged as the first who stemmed the torrent of rebellion in Bengal. He fell gloriously at the relief of Lucknow, 25 Sept. 1857, aged 47."

Legh Richmond. Major Nicholas m. 1st, Matilda-Anne, youngest dau. of the late Lieut.-Col. Lineage.—From ancient deeds in the Heralds' Office, the origin of the Nicholas family dates about the time of Edward III, and was then connected with John, Lord de la Roche's family—Gilbert de la Roch mentioning William Nicholas, of Ryndway or Roundway, Wilts, in a deed, and Thomas Nicholas in a deed, 1 and 2 Edward II, 1307-9, and 4 Edward III, as witness with William Sandon, 1331. The Devizes or Roundway branch of the Nicholas family is probably the original stock of all others bearing the surname and settled at Winterbourn, Earls Moningford, Bruce, or Allcannings. In evidence that their mansion was at Roundway 400 years back, is a statement in their pedigree (Harleian MSS. 1443) that William, 2nd son of John Nicholas, who d. in 1461, was slain without the gate-house of Rounday—an event associated with the desolating Wars of the Roses, and pointing to the period of Tewkesbury fight. It would be difficult to classify the individuals recorded in the registers at Devizes, Southbroom, and Bishops Cannings, but it may be briefly stated that John Nicholas was mayor of the borough in 1610; that Griffin Nicholas of Roundway d. 1634, and Robert Nicholas in 1667. A monument in Southbroom church to Robert Nicholas, Esq., "des les Devizes," refers to a gentleman whose parish was St. John's.

The next in succession seems to be Robert Nicholas, justice of the borough, who d. in 1725, at the age of 63: his 2nd wife, Jane, dau. of John Child, M.P. for Devizes, brother of Sir Francis Child, the first London banker, was the mother of Edward Nicholas, b. 1696, who m. into the family of Ashton Keynes, North Wilts, and d. in 1731. This lady's virtues are largely set forth in the principal Nicholas tablet at Southbroom—an elaborate monument, executed in veined white marble and flanked with Roman Ionic pillars. She survived her husband 21 years, leaving one son,

Edward-Richmond Nicholas, M.B., the Dr. Nicholas whose death in 1770, as an eminent physician in Devizes, is recorded in the Salisbury Journal. The family pedigree further shows that Judge Robert Nicholas, of Alcannings, M.P. for Devizes in the Long Parliament, was not only the principal character in the story of The Torn Curtain, commemorated under fictitious names in the Spectator, but in 1642 was an active manager of the impeachment against Archbishop Laud. Anthony à Wood says of this friend of the Commonwealth that he was of the same family with those two most loyal gentlemen, Sir Edward Nicholas, secretary of state to King Charles I, and Dr. Matthew Nicholas, dean of St. Paul's, who were both b. at Winterbourn Earls, in Wiltshire. This assertion may be true enough, but as it is also true the Nicholas family had a seat at Roundway for centuries previous, the locality of the original stock may presumptively be placed in Devizes and its neighbourhood. On the authority of this History of Devizes we also find that Sir Oliver Nicholas, sworn cupbearer to James I, and carver to Charles I, was of this family, and that his son Edward, m. Mary Lane, dau. of Thomas Lane, of Bentley, co. Stafford, whose sister, Jane Lane, as is well known, assisted the flight of King Charles II after the battle of Worcester. The pedigree of the family

* Among the records of the dean and chapter of Gloucester exists a copy of a reversionary lease (temp. Henry VII) granted to Andrew Niblet, and Joan, his wife, of the manor, &c. of Brokethrope, which John Niblet then held; subsequently, an absolute lease (temp. Henry VIII) to the same Andrew Niblet, Joan, his wife, Agnes and Margaret, his daus.

† Catherine Whitcombe was representative of Mavesyns of Shropshire, and the Mortons of Herefordshire, of whom was the celebrated Cardinal and Archbishop John Morton, prime minister to Henry VII.

further shows that there were two brothers, Capt. Oliver Nicholas, of the bedchamber of his Royal Highness James, Duke of York, and John Nicholas, an ensign of the Duke of York's company of foot at Portsmouth, and also Robert Nicholas, Esq., was nominated by His Majesty King CHARLES I the first recorder of Devizes. The next event to be noticed is the marriage of the son of Dr. Nicholas, the aforesaid physician of Devizes, in 1778, namely,

ROBERT NICHOLAS,* F.S.A. of Ashton Keynes, Wilts, M.P. for Cricklade, many years chairman of Hon. NORTH OF NEWTON AND THURLAND CASTLE.

NORTH, RICHARD-TOULMIN, Esq. of Newton, and Thurland Castle, both co. Lancaster, J.P., b. 7 Jan., 1782, late a lieut. and capt. Coldstream-guards.

Lineage.—Baines in his History of Lancashire (vol. 4, page 622) says, in reference to the manor of Whittington in which the townships of Newton and Docker are situated,

"In the reign of JAMES I, the Lord of Hornby claimed Whittington as a mesne manor, the family of Bordrigge, are said to have been Lords of Whittington in the last century, and James Bordrigge, in 17 CHARLES I, had estates in Tunstall, Burrow, and Whittington. An heiress of this family, m. Richard North, Esq., a descendant of the Norths of Docker, and grandfather to the present lord of the manor. The hamlet of Docker, contains two halls, both designated Docker Hall, one known to have been in existence, before the reign of JAMES I, was the residence of Thomas North, in that reign, and his descendant of the same name dying in July, 1790, the estate was sold to Mr. Joseph Gibson, of Kirkby Lonsdale, whose nephew, Joseph Gibson, Esq., is the present owner." Baines also says, "The Hall (Newton), now in ruins, belongs to Richard-Toulmin North, Esq., as part of his manor of Thurland."

There are one or two mistakes in Baines's account. It was Oliver (son of Richard), and grandfather to the present R.-T. North, who m. in 1734, Alice, the heiress of the Bordrigges. Docker Hall, together with the estates of Gunnerthwaite and Sandbeds, were sold by Thomas North, Esq., in 1817.

Newton Hall, though in the manorship of Tunstall, is in the parish of Whittington, and was for many generations, the seat of this branch of the North family, though it had not been inhabited by them for 80 years, and having got much out of repair, the old house was pulled down a few years ago, Miles, the father of R.-T. North, being the last who was born there.

The Norths have had estates in Docker and Newton, in the parish of Whittington from time immemorial, and there are numerous records of them in the registers (some of the oldest and best kept in the county) from their commencement in the reign of HENRY VIII.

The THOMAS NORTH, of Docker and Newton, mentioned by Baines, was baptised in Feb. 1580 (and was the son of Richard, and grandson of Edward North and Margerie his wife). His son and heir, Richard, m. and had issue, by Alice his wife,

NORTHMORE OF CLEVE.

NORTHMORE, JOHN, Esq. of Cleve House, co. Devon, J.P., b. 1 June, 1826.

Lineage.—The family of Northmore is one of great antiquity in Devonshire. It appears from old family records that JOHN NORTHMORE was seised of lands in the 6th year of King EDWARD III, in the parish of South Tawton, co. Devon, where his descendants continued to reside down to the latter part of the 17th century, when the existing mansion and estate of Cleve, in the parish of St. Thomas, having been acquired by an ancestor of the present owner, the old residence of Well, in South Tawton, was gradually abandoned, and subsequently alienated. That the family also possessed considerable property, and had much influence in Somersetshire, at an early date, is evident from the will of another JOHN NORTHMORE, A.D. 1411, still extant in Doctors' Commons, wherein he makes large bequests to the church of St. Mary Magdalen, in Taunton. The family records also make allusion to RICHARD NORTHMORE, living at South Tawton, in 1433, and to his son WILLIAM NORTHMORE in 1481. In the year 1535, King HENRY VIII appears also to have granted to the family (one John Nortmore having been a page of honour to that sovereign) the manor of Topsham, and a moiety of the dues arising out of Lammas Fair, in Exeter, as an appurtenance of the said manor, and their rights were not alienated till 1779. The disjointed and imperfectly preserved records of the family do not, however, permit of a connected pedigree being traced further back than

RICHARD NORTHMORE, Esq. of Well, in South Tawton, b. circa 1520, who, by his wife Joan (who d. 1585), left at his decease, in June, 1594, among other children, a son and heir,

NUGENT OF PORTAFERRY.

NUGENT, ANDREW, Esq. of Portaferry, co. Down, capt. royal Scots greys, b. 30 March, 1834.

Lineage.—The very ancient Anglo-Norman house of SAVAGE, which Mr. Nugent paternally represents, was settled at Portaferry, co. Down, since the time of the first conquest of Ireland by John de Courcy, Earl of Ulster, in 1117. Under that famous warrior, the original ancestor in Ireland established himself in the county of Down, and by a written document, dated 1 Sept. 1205, in the Tower of London, we find "Robin, son of William Savage, named as one of De Courcy's hostages for his appearance before King JOHN." The present Barony of Lecale was anciently termed the Territory of the Savages, wherein, at Ardglass, they and their dependents erected seven castles, the ruins of which are still extant. It appears, also, that a stately monastery of Dominicans was founded at Newton, in the Little Ards, A.D. 1424, by the Savages, "gentlemen of English extraction."

Lineage.—The O'CALLAGHANS derive their descent and name from CEALLACHAN CATHEL, the famous King of Munster in the 10th century. The territory of this family comprised the parishes of Clonmeen and Kilshanig, in the barony of Duhallow, co. Cork, and contained about 50,000 acres. Their chief residence was Clonmeen Castle previous to the reign of Queen ELIZABETH, at which period Connogher O'Callaghan was lord and chieftain. He was the 18th in direct descent from Ceallachan. By Johanna, his wife, dau of Tirrelagh M'Swiny, he left issue, at his decease, 31 May, 1612, a son and heir, CALLAGHAN O'CALLAGHAN, high sheriff of the co. Cork in 1620, who m. Hon. Joan Butler, dau. of James, 2nd Lord Dunboyne, and d. 31 May, 1631, leaving issue an only dau. and heiress, ELLEN O'CALLAGHAN. In the reign of JAMES I we find CAHIR O'CALLAGHAN, living in the castle of Drumaneen, within about three miles of Mallow. The stately ruins of this once grand abode still attract the eye, occupying as they do a bold and prominent position on the southern banks of the river Blackwater. This Cahir O'Callaghan was the twentieth in direct descent from Cathlachan, and was second and third cousin to Callaghan O'Callaghan, who d. 1631. He m. Helen, dau. of Callaghan McCarty, Esq. of Carranamuck, co. Cork, was living in the year 1644, and had issue four sons, viz., DONAGH, his heir, Conagher, Callaghan, and Tiege. His eldest son, DONOGH O'CALLAGHAN, m. the above Ellen, the dau. and heir of Callaghan, thus uniting the Clonmeen and Drumaneen properties. But being implicated in the rebellion of 1641, he forfeited his estates. He was, however, subsequently declared entitled to their restoration, but never obtained them. He got in lieu thereof lands in the co. Clare, where he went to reside. This Donogh O'Callaghan was of Mount Allen, co. Clare, and "the O'Callaghan" during his life. He d. before 1690, leaving a son and heir, DONOGH O'CALLAGHAN, also of Mount Allen, and "the O'Callaghan" during his life. He d. in 1698, leaving issue by his wife Mary, five sons, I. Donogh; II. Michael; III. DANIEL; IV. Teige; v. Cornelius. The 3rd son, DANIEL O'CALLAGHAN, was, in 1715, of Mount Allen, and "the O'Callaghan"; he m. Catherine, 2nd dau. of Nicholas Purcell, titular baron of Loughmoe; he d. in 1724-5, and she in 1731-2. He was s. by his son and heir, DONOGH O'CALLAGHAN, Esq. of Kilgory, co. Clare, who in 1742, m. Hannah, dau. of Christopher O'Brien, Esq. of Newhall, co. Clare, and, at his decease, left a son and heir, EDMOND O'CALLAGHAN, Esq., barrister-at-law, the father of Bridget O'Callaghan, wife of Thomas Reilly, Esq.; Catherine O'Callaghan, the late wife of Thomas Browne, Earl of Kenmare; Ellen O'Callaghan, wife of James Bagot, Esq. of Castle Bagot; Elizabeth O'Callaghan, wife of Gerald Deasc, Esq., nephew of Lord Fingal; and another dau., who became a nun.

O'CONOR DON.

O'CONOR DON, CHARLES-OWEN, of Belanagare and Clonalis, co. Roscommon, M.P. for that co., b. 7 May, 1838.

Lineage.—EOCHOID MORGHMEDHIN, the son of Muireadhach Tireach, d. King of Ireland, A.D. 366, leaving issue several sons, of whom three are particularly noticed in the Irish annals, viz., BRIAN (whose youngest sr., DUACH GALACH, first Christian King of Connaught in 438, was ancestor of the O'Conors), FIACHRA, and NIAL. From these are descended the Hi Bruin, Hi Fiachra, and Hi Nial, families of Ireland. The most powerful, the Hi Bruins, divided into several branches, the most distinguished of which was known by the name of clan Muireadhaigh, in memory of Muireadhach Muillethan, who d. King of Connaught in 702.

CONCHOBHAR, alias CONOR, who d. King of Connaught in 973, was the ninth generation from Muiredach Muillethan, and from him the principal branch of the clan Muireadhaigh took the name of O'Conor that is, the descendants of Conor, or Conchobhar, who d. in 973. They are continually distinguished by that name from the year 1012.

In the 12th century, this family became the most powerful in Ireland; from being provincial kings of Connaught, their chiefs became sovereigns of all Ireland. Tordhelach O'Conor was received as supreme king of all Ireland, in 1136, and reigned twenty years, to 1156, when he died. He left two sons, Roderick, the last monarch of Ireland, of the Milesian line, and Cathal Crobh-dearg, or Cathal of the Red Hand. Roderick's history is well known. In 1174, his chancellor, Laurence O'Toole, signed the treaty of Windsor with King HENRY II, which may be seen in Rymer. By this treaty, he resigned the supreme monarchy to HENRY II, reserving Connaught as an independent kingdom to himself. Connaught then included the present county of Clare, and extended from Limerick to the river Drobhais, which separates Connaught from Ulster. Roderick's descendants became extinct in the person of Conor Moenmor O'Conor; and from his brother, Cathal, of the Red Hand, who d. in 1224, directly descends, O'CONOR DON, present head of the family.

CATHAL OF CHARLES CROBH-DHEARG, next brother of Roderick O'Conor, monarch of Ireland, who d. in 1198, was elected to the sovereignty after the decease of Conor-Maon-Voy O'Conor. From him descended, in a direct unbroken male line,

TIRLAGH DON (or the Dark) O'CONOR, from whom, according to some, proceeded the appellation of O'Conor Don.* Tirlagh d. in 1406. His lineal descendant,

SIR HUGH O'CONOR DON, of Ballintobber, b. in 1541, having submitted to Queen ELIZABETH in 1585, compounded with the Lord-Deputy Perrott for all his estates, and was knighted by Robert, Earl of Essex, 24 July, 1599. In the Tyrone war he joined the Queen's forces, and commanded the horse at the battle of the Curliews. Sir Hugh was the first knight of the shire returned to parliament by the co. Roscommon. He m. Mary, dau. of Sir Brian O'Rourke, Lord of Breffny, in Connaught, M.P. for Roscommon, and d. in 1627, leaving four sons,

I. CALVACH O'CONOR DON, of Ballintobber, his heir, whose male line became EXTINCT.
II. HUGH-OGE O'CONOR, of Castlerecagh, who m. Jane, dau. of Theobald, Lord Dillon, and dying, left an elder son,
 DANIEL O'CONOR, of Clonalis, who left, by Anne Birmingham, his wife, dau of Lord Athenry, one son,
 ANDREW O'CONOR, of Clonalis, co. Roscommon, who became O'CONOR DON. He m. 3 March, 1692, Honora, dau. of Col. Luke Dowell, of Mantua, and by her, who d. 11 Nov. 1748, had two sons, Daniel, his heir;

* Other statements carry up the period of the adoption of the style Don to the time of the Milesian invasion under Prince Don, the son of Milesius.

O'CONNOR OF DUNDERMOTT.

O'CONNOR, PATRICK-HUGH, Esq. of Dundermott, co. Roscommon, J.P., high sheriff co. Roscommon in 1860.

Lineage.—The O'Connors of Dundermott are a branch of the illustrious house of O'Connor, in which vested the sovereignty of Connaught. They claim lineal descent from Sir HUGH O'CONNOR, of Ballintubber Castle, co. Roscommon (the acknowledged representative of the last kings of Ireland), through his 4th son, CAPTAIN BRYAN O'CONNOR, of Corrasduna, co. Roscommon.

CAPTAIN BRYAN O'CONNOR, who became seised and possessed of the lands of Beagh and Cloonycarney, under his father's will, forfeited them with others in 1641, and it appears from the Book of Survey, and distribution of estates then forfeited, that by a decree made in Athlone, 5 Sept. 1655, founded on the claim of Col. Roger O'Connor, Bryan's son, that those estates were restored to his mother, Mary, for life, with reversion to himself and his heirs. Again, from the Book of Postings on the sale of lands forfeited in 1688, it appears that Roger O'Connor forfeited the said lands of Beagh and Cloonycarney. Col. Roger O'Connor, who held the commission of colonel in JAMES II.'s army (which commission still remains in the possession of his heir-at-law), m. Elizabeth, dau. of the O'Shaughnessy of Gort.

O'DONOVAN OF CLAN CATHAL.

O'DONOVAN, MORGAN-WILLIAM, Chieftain of the ancient Irish sept of O'Donovan, of Clan Cathal, in Carbery, co. Cork, barrister-at-law, b. 21 Aug. 1796;

m. 2 July, 1844, Susanna, 2nd dau. of William-Armstrong Creed, Esq. of Ballybrack, co. Cork, late of the 4th regt. of foot, and had a dau., Anne Melian, d. Jan. 1846.

Lineage.—This sept is one of the oldest among the aboriginal Irish, and in ancient times possessed an extensive territory, called the Cantred of Hy Dunobhan, situated between the present towns of Bantry, Dunmanway, Rosscarbery, and Skibbereen, in the south-west of the co. of Cork, of parts of which the estates of the chieftains of the late and present lines consist. Keatinge traces its descent from the oldest branches of his Hibernian genealogy, and places their escutcheon as thirteenth in his armorial tables. Mr. Gough, in his edition of Camden's Britannia, following the account given by Dr. Smith, the historian of the co. of Cork, published in 1750, says—"The Irish antiquarians allow but eight families of royal extraction in Munster, of which they place four in Carbery, which comprehended all the south-west part of this co. (Cork), and these were, beside the MacCarthys, O'Mahon, or Mahown, O'Donovan, and O'Driscol. The O'Donovans are allowed to be of royal extraction. Their territory in this co. went formerly by the name of Clancahill, a part of West Carbery, comprehending the large and mountainous parish of Dromaleague and other tracts, in which parish they had their chief residence at Castle Donovan. This family came hither from a barony in the co. Limerick, called Coshma, where they built the famous Castle of Crom, which afterwards fell to the Kildare family, and from which the motto, 'Crom-a-boo,' still used by that noble house, was taken. The representative of this ancient family has his seat at Benlaghan, in West Carbery." Beside Castle Donovan, he says, the castles of Banduff and Rahine also belonged to them: those of Gortnaclogh, Ivor or Ire, and others, were theirs of old.

By marriage the O'Donovans have been allied to the noble houses of Kildare, Clanricarde, Clancarthy (MacCarthy), Barrymore and Riversdale, and with the families of O'Shaughnessye, Kearny, Becher, and others of distinction in the co. Cork.

DONELL O'DONOVAN recognised by Lord Chancellor Adam Loftus as chieftain lawfully inaugurated according to the Irish custom, surrendered his territory of Clancahill to King JAMES I, in 1608, and received a re-grant of the entire of it in 1615. He lived at his Castle of Rahine, and rebuilt Castle Donovan in 1626, as appears by an inscription there. His last will, now in the Prerogative Office, is dated in 1629. He was buried in the abbey of Timoleague. By his wife, Joanna, dau. of Sir Owen-MacCartie Reagh, chieftain of Carbery, he had seven sons, viz.,

I. DANIEL, his heir, who lost his estates in 1641. His son, DANIEL O'DONOVAN, col. in the army of JAMES II, and a devoted adherent of that monarch, was grandfather of DANIEL O'DONOVAN, who, by his last will, dated 1770, devised a remainder in his estates, on failure of the male issue of his two sons, RICHARD and JOHN, to his "kinsman, Morgan Donovan, Esq. of the city of Cork." The 2nd son, John, an officer in the army, was killed in the Maroon war, 1796. JAMES FARRELL, who m. sometime about 1772, Mary, dau. of Charles and Alice Evers, was son of Patrick O'Farrell, who accompanied James O'Farrell, the first of Minard, to that place, and resided with his wife and family at Minard, to the time of his death in 1780. O'GRADY OF KILBALLYOWEN.

O'GRADY, WILLIAN-WISE-DE-COURCY, of Kilballyowen, co. Limerick, chief of his name, and as such styled THE O'GRADY, m. 13 Sept. 1841, Anna-Richarda, elder dau. of Thomas De Rinzy, Esq. of Clobemon Hall, and has (with other issue) a son, THOMAS DE COURCY.

Lineage.—The Milesian family of O'GRADY is one of the most ancient of the co. of Limerick. Dr. O'Brien, late catholic bishop of Cloyne, in his Irish and English Dictionary, p. 514 (see also Keating, vol. ii., p. 401, ed. 1809), assigns Conal-Eachluath, King of Munster, A.D. 366, and sixth in descent from Oilliol Olum (of the race of HEBER, the eldest son of MILESIUS, King of Spain, who colonised Ireland) as the common ancestor of the G'Gradys and the O'Briens; but the latter having, subsequently in the person of BRIEN BOROIMHE, the renowned monarch of Ireland, established an ascendant power in North Munster, or Thomond, of which they became hereditary rulers, the O'Gradys acknowledged their paramount sway, and were arrayed as dynasts, or chiefs of a sept, under the banners of these provincial princes. The O'Gradys diverging, in process of time, from the parent stock of Kilballyowen, spread into the various collateral branches of Cappercullen, Elton, Grange, Lodge, Rahan, Cahir, Mount Prospect, &c.

In the interval between 1276 and 1310, the chieftainship of the sept vested in

DONALD O'GRADY, who fell in battle in 1309, leaving a son,

HUGH O'GRADY, of Kilballyowen, lands acquired the same year in marriage with the dau. and heiress of O'Kerwick, chief of Aniah Cliah, and which have since remained the principal residence of his descendants. His son and heir,

Mr. Kelly served as high sheriff of co. Galway in 1819-20.

Lineage.—CELLACH, chief of Hy-Many, and 14th in descent from MAINE MOR, was the progenitor from whom the O'Kellys derived their surname. He was father of AEDH, of whom no mention occurs in the Irish Annals, and it does not appear that he was ever chief of Hy-Many. His son, MURCHADH, is the first who could have taken the name of O'CELLAIGH or O'KELLY, as being the O (nepos or grandson) of Cellach. He seems to have succeeded Murchadhan, the son of Soobhachan, in the chieftainship, and to have d. in 960. Murchadh was s. by his son, TADHG MOR O'KELLY, chief of Hy-Many, for thirteen years who fell at Clontarf, fighting under the banner of Brian Boruma, A.D. 1014. This warlike chieftain left (with other issue) a son and heir, CONCHOBHAR or CONOR O'KELLY, chief of Hy-Many, who was slain in 1030. He was father of CONCHOBHAR O'KELLY, whose son, TADHG O'KELLY, mentioned in the annals of the Four Masters, at the year 1074, was s. by his son, DIARMAID O'KELLY, who is stated to have been Prince of Hy-Many for sixty years, but as no notice of him occurs in the authentic annals, this can scarcely be true. Diarmaid was father of CONCHOBHAR MOENMAIGHE O'KELLY, stated to have been prince, or arch-chief of Hy-Many, for forty years. According to the annals of the Four Masters, he built O'Kelly's Church, at Clonmacnoise, in the year 1167, and was slain by Conor Moenmoy O'Conor, the son of King RODERIC, in 1180, together with his son, TADHG TAILLTENNA. This latter was father of

DOMHNALL MOR O'KELLY, chief of Hy-Many, whose death is recorded by the Irish annals to have taken place in 1224. He m. Duvcola, dau. of Domhnall Mor O'Brien, King of Munster, and had issue, I. CONCHOBHAR, of whom presently; II. Tadhg-Finn, of Magh Ruscach, living in 1293; III. Eoghan, from whom derived the sept of Clanmuicse, who gave their name to the barony of Clonmacnoven, in the east of co. Galway; IV. Thomas, bishop of Clonfert, d. in 1263; V. Lochlainn; VI. Diarmaid, ancestor of the family of Mac Eochadha or KEOGH. The eldest son,

CONCHOBHAR O'KELLY, chief of Hy-Many for twenty-one years, m. 1st, the dau. of O'Heyne, by whom he had two sons,

I. Domhnall, chief of Hy-Many, who resigned that dignity to his brother Eoine, and retired into the monastery of Knockmoy, where he d. in 1295. His son, GILBERT O'KELLY, chief of Hy-Many, was ancestor of the senior line of the family, the O'KELLYS of Belagallda.
II. Murchadh or Morogh.

Conchobhar's 2nd wife was Deibhail, dau. of O'Loughlin Burren, and by her he was father of DONNCHADH MUIMHNEACH, ancestor of all the subsequent chiefs, and Maine, chief of Hy-Many. He m. 3rdly, Edavin, dau. of Macnamara, and by her had Cathal na Finne, Caibre, and Maurice. The son of the 2nd marriage,

DONNCHADH MUIMHNEACH, or DONOGH, the MOMONIAN O'KELLY, was chief of Hy-Many. His grandson,

MAELEACHLAINN O'KELLY, in whose favour his father, William Boy O'Kelly had resigned, six years previously, the chieftainship of Hy-Many, m. twice, and had, with other issue, BRYAN, ancestor of the KELLYS of Screen; and Donchadh or Donogh, ancestor of the O'KELLYS of Gallagh.

BRIAN O'KELLY, Tanist of Hy-Many, the elder son, m. Edavin, dau. of Cathal O'Conor, King of Connaught, and had issue,

I. AEDH or HUGH, chief of Hy-Many, ancestor of the O'KELLYS of Athlecrue, represented by DANIEL KELLY, Esq. of Cargins. Of this family was the late Thomas Kelly, judge of the Court of Common Pleas in Ireland.
II. MAGHNUS or MANUS, of whose descendants, the O'KELLYS of Screen, we are about to treat.

Brian d. in 1393. His 2nd son,

The family of Snead, or Snede, of Wentnor, is of great antiquity, deriving its name from the village of Snead, near Bishop's Castle, but within the Welsh border. It is probable that the Sneads lost the Welsh portion of their estates, when Howel Bowdler, Lord of Wentnor, was deprived of those belonging to him at Chirbury, near Snead, namely, at the failure at the insurrection in favour of Owain Glyndwr, 5 Henry IV. After this time the Sneads are found at the Mesne Hall, Wentnor, near Norbury.

O'MALLEY OF THE LODGE.

O'MALLEY, FREDERICK-WILLIAM, Esq. of The Lodge, co. Mayo, capt. 71st highlanders, holds the Crimean and Indian medals, b. 3 June, 1836; s. his father 19 Dec. 1849.

Lineage.—The O'Malleys are among the oldest families in Mayo, and their prince reigned as sovereign over a great extent of territory on the western coast of Ireland called Umalia, or the "Oules of O'Malley" (which latter name is not yet quite effaced), and including the islands lying between Sligo and Galway Bay. They were possessed of great maritime power, and still enjoy a traditionary reputation as the most persevering and successful opponents of the Danes.

It is recorded that Brien Boru waited at Athlone to be joined by O'Malley's forces before he advanced to give battle to the invaders at Clontarf. Tradition also states that the O'Malleys were the founders of the great college of Mayo, where so many of the princes of Europe are said to have been educated, and where a son of the King of Bohemia is buried; and at a much later period, about the middle of the 15th century, they established, according to M'Geoghegan, the Abbey of Murrisk.* In the reign of Queen MARY of England,

LOUGHLIN O'MALLEY, son of Owen O'Malley, was Lord High Admiral of Connaught, and added to his family arms a ship, as an emblem of his office. He d. circa 1580, leaving an infant son,

EDMUND O'MALLEY, b. in 1579, under the guardianship of his aunt, the celebrated GRACE O'MALLEY, or Grana Uile, who seized the supreme power, and maintained herself against the English, defeating the troops sent against her; but, having afterwards formed an alliance with Sir Richard Bingham, and assisted him with her forces, was invited to the court of Queen ELIZABETH. She m. M'William Oughter, and left a son, the first Viscount Bourke, of Mayo, for whom she stripped her nephew of a considerable portion of his territory. Edmund adhered to the cause of CHARLES I, and d. in exile at Breda, in 1651, leaving a son and successor,

CHARLES O'MALLEY, last prince of the O'Malleys, who was present, when very young, at the battle of Worcester, and accompanied his father to Breda. At the Restoration, he recovered the barony of Murisk, co. Mayo (forming but a very small portion of the territory belonging to his family previous to the Civil War), and received from CHARLES II a patent for the same. He attended JAMES II through all his Irish campaigns, and d. with him in exile at St. Germains, in 1692, having refused to come in under the capitulation of Limerick †. He m. at the court of Spain, the dau. of Sir Christopher Garvey, maid of honour to the Queen, and was s. his only son,

TEIGUE, or THADY O'MALLEY, who held a commission as capt. of Irish dragoons, during the campaigns which terminated in the siege of Limerick. His eldest son,

LOUGHLIN O'MALLEY, b. in 1698, commonly called O'Malley-More, from his great height, m. 25 Nov. 1719, Jane, dau. of Thomas Cuffe, Esq. of Creagh, co. Mayo, and had several sons and daus., all of whom d. young, except the youngest son,

GEORGE O'MALLEY, Esq. of Prospect House, co. Galway, and of Snugborough, co. Mayo, who s. his father. He was b. in 1734; m. in 1753, Margery, dau. of Thomas Birmingham, Esq. of co. Galway, and d. in 1802, having had several children, all of whom d. unm. except two sons,

* It is stated that about the year 1,000, a 2nd son of the then Prince of the O'Malleys, after finishing his studies at the College of Mayo, went to travel, and passing through France, was so well received at the court of that kingdom, that he settled there and founded the noble family of De Maillé in that country.

† Charles O'Malley had five brothers, all of whom went abroad with him. One joined the French army and died soon after. The rest proceeded to the frontiers of Hungary to fight against the Turks then at war with the Emperor. Of these one only was ever heard of after; he rose to be a general officer and Count of the Empire.

Peter (the eldest), m., and had issue several sons and daus., who all d. unm., except one son, Charles-Anthony, now settled abroad.

Lineage.—The name and origin of the house of O'Neill are traced by Irish annalists to the prince professor of learning, NIUL, A.M. 1800, son of Phenius Pharsa, King of Scythia, whose posterity arriving in Spain, Miletus, 21st in decent from Niul, became king of the northern provinces, and his widow, Queen Scota, and sons, about 1200 years B.C. led a colony of "Milesians" to Ireland, where Heremon, the youngest, became the first monarch.

NIALL THE GREAT, 53rd in descent from Heremon, was King of Ireland, A.D. 388. He subdued the Picts and Britons, and after ravishing the coasts of Gaul, was assassinated on the banks of the Loire, near Boulogne. His army, on its return, carried off, among other captives, St. Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland. For upwards of 600 years afterwards Niall's descendants exclusively occupied the throne of Ireland. Three kings of his posterity were named after him, viz., NIALL II., surnamed FRASSACH, who d. 770; NIALL III, surnamed CAILLE, drowned in the river Callan, A.D. 897; and NIALL IV, surnamed GLUNDUBH, "black knee," killed in battle by the Danes of Dublin, A.D. 954.

Lineage.—RAGALLAGH (the son of CATHALAN, Prince of Brefny, and grandson of DUBH CRON, a leading chief against the Danes, who was eldest son of MAOLMORDHA, Dynast of East Brefny, lineally descended from BRIAN, the 4th Milesian King of Connaught) s. his father in the government of Muintir Maolmordha, A.D. 981, and commanded the royal army during the regin of Maolseachlain until the dethronement of that prince, in 1002, in favour of Brian Boroimh, from which period Raghallach, accompanied that celebrated chief in all his expeditions, and at length fell with him at the battle of Clontarf. Ragallagh's son and successor,

ARTEN, Prince of East Brefny, was father of

TARGAILLE, Prince of East Brefny, who was the first that assumed the name of UA RAGALLAGH, or O'REILLY. From this time, too, the principality of East Brefny, went by the appellation of Brefny O'Reilly, and that of West Brefny by that of Brefny O'Ruarc, until both were converted into shire ground, called counties by Queen ELIZABETH, under the government of Thomas, Earl of Sussex, A.D. 1562, at which time the eastern division was called the co. of Cavan, and the western the co. of Leitrim. Our limited spaces precludes us from entering minately into the history of the subsequent O'Reillys, Princes of Brefny, until we come to

JOHN O'REILLY, Prince of Brefny, who was engaged in a lengthened warfare with Aodh-Oge, the son of Aodh-Ruadh Macmahon, for the maintenance of his inheritance. He m. Catharine, dau. of Coan, son of Dowel O'Neil, Prince of Tyrone, and was s. by his eldest son,

FERGAL O'REILLY, Prince of Brefny, who d. in 1536, when his next brother,

MAOLMORDHA, or MYLES O'REILLY, was declared sovereign Prince of East Brefny. He m. Marjory, dau. of Hugh-Dubh O'Donnell, Dynast of Tirconnell, and dying in 1565, had issue,

O'Reilly, following the example of O'Neill, O'Donnell, and all the neighbouring princes, repaired to Dublin, made his submission to the Lord Deputy, St. Leger, and took an oath of allegiance to HENRY VIII; despite which, however, we find him engaged in 1552, in hostilities against the Lord-Lieut., Sir James Crofts, who had imprisoned O'Neill. Subsequently, a feud arose between the O'Neills and the O'Reillys which led to much bloodshed, and the overthrow of O'Neills army. O'Reilly was s. by his eldest son,

AODH, or HUGH O'REILLY, Prince of Brefny, surnamed Connell. The Prince m. thrice: 1st, the dau. of Betagh, Lord of Moynalty, co. Meath, by whom he had three sons, I. JOHN-RUADH (Sir), of whom presently; II. Philip, Prince of Brefny, slain in 1596, — (his son Miles was father of Edmond, whose son Miles was one of the most experienced and distinguished officers during the war of 1641; after the reduction of his country in 1652, he accompanied his cousin, Philip O'Reilly, to Spain, and was there raised by his Catholic Majesty to the rank of Marechal de Camp; he d. universally regretted in 1670); and III. Eogan, elected Prince of Brefny at the decease of Edmond of Kilnacrott, in 1601, and d. in 1603. Hugh O'Reilly m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Sir Thomas Nugent, Knt. of Carlanstown, co. Westmeath, and by her had one son, MAOLMORDHA, who s. his half-brother, Eogan, as Prince of Brefny, and held the government until the plantation of Ulster, in 1609. He m. 3rdly, Isabella Barnaval. O'Reilly d. in 1583, when his eldest son,

SIR JOHN O'REILLY, set up for the sovereignty in opposition to his uncle, Edmond, who had been elected Tanist. John, finding his party weak, repaired to England to solicit ELIZABETH's aid, and was kindly received at court, invested with the order of knighthood, and returned with letters from the Queen to the Lord-Deputy and Council of Ireland, instructing them to support him and his claim. By this powerful interest, Edmond the Tanist was set aside for Sir John, who, being then quietly settled in the government of East Brefny, was deputed, along with his uncle Edmond, representative for the co. Cavan in the Parliament held in Dublin, in May, 1585, to which all the other chiefs of the kingdom were invited, with a view of bringing them to a due submission to the government and laws of England. In the month of November following, Sir John O'Reilly entered into certain articles of composition and agreement with Sir John Perrott, Lord-Deputy of the Council of Ireland, whereby he consented to surrender the principality of East Brefny to the Queen, on condition of obtaining it again from the Crown in capite by English tenure. This stipulation was acceded, and a deed of feoffment perfected on the last day of Aug. 1590. Sir John m. the dau. of Philip Oge O'Reilly, Chief Tochtar Tira, and had issue,

MAOLMORDHA, or MYLES, the Beautiful, who opposed his grand uncle, Edmond O'Reilly, the Tanist, in the succession, but was slain in a contest near the Blackwater, 14 Aug. 1598. He left a son, Miles, who d. s. p. 1617.

HUGH, father of two sons, PHILIP and Miles. The elder, who raised a brigade of 1200 men, chiefly composed of his own name and family, and served with distinction as lieut.-gen. in the confederate army of the Catholics of Ireland, during the civil wars of 1641, was appointed by the Assembly of Kilkenny, lord president of Ulster. After the reduction of Ireland by CROMWELL, Hugh O'Reilly retired with his brigade into the Spanish service, in the Netherlands, where he died soon after, and was buried in the monastery of St. Dominick, in the city of Louvain. By Rosa O'Neill, his wife, he had an only son, HUGH-RUADH O'REILLY, who was slain by the Cromwellians in 1651, leaving, by Margaret, his wife, dau. of Conor O'Brien, Viscount Clare, a son, HUGH, drowned at sea on his voyage to Spain. His cousin and next of kin, EDMOND BUIDH O'REILLY (son of Miles, and grandson of Hugh, the son of Sir John O'Reilly), served in the army of France, whence he accompanied JAMES II to Ireland in 1688, and was by that monarch appointed governor of the county of Cavan, or East Brefny. During the campaigns that followed he fought gallantly for his ill-fated prince, and at length, after the capitulation of Limerick, retired with his brigade to France, where he d. in 1693, leaving, by Joan, his wife, dau. of Bryan O'Farrall, Lord of Mote, co. Longford, an only son, EOGAN O'REILLY, who m. at St. Germain en Laye, the dau. of Col. Felix O'Neill, and had a son, EDMOND O'REILLY, who, at the beginning of the French revolution, was resident in Paris, with the rank of lieut.-col. in Dillon's regt., and Knight of the Royal and Military Order of St. Louis.

At Sir John's decease, which occurred 1 June, 1596, his uncle,

EDMOND O'REILLY, of Kilnacrott, s. as Prince of East Brefny. He m. twice: 1st, a dau. of the noble house of Plunket; and 2ndly, a dau. of that of Nugent, and had several children; from his youngest son is sprung the SCARVAGH family (which see); he d. April, 1601. His 3rd son,

Cavan in 1689, who raised a regt. of drags. at his own expense, for the service of King JAMES II. He m. Margaret, dau. of Owen O'Reilly, and d. in Feb. 1716, having had, with two daus., five sons,

ORPEN OF KERRY.

Lineage.—The family of Orpen is of ancient origin.

FRANCIS ORPEN, lived near Farleigh Castle, in Somersetshire. By Agnes Edwards, his wife, he was father of JOHN ORPEN, who probably was father of

SIR JOHN ORPEN, Knt. whose son,

ROBERT ORPEN, Esq. m. a dau. of Col. Stephenson, one of whose sisters m. O'Donoghue, of Ross, co. Kerry, and another was the wife of M'Carthy More. Thus the Orpens became connected with many of the leading families of Kerry. Robert Orpen's son,

RICHARD ORPEN, Esq. m. Mary, dau. of Henry Ley, Esq. of Teffont Ewyas, Wilts, and sister to Sir James Ley, lord chief justice of the court of King's Bench, and by her had a son, ROBERT. Richard Orpen, a devoted royalist, fell at the battle of Naseby, in 1646. His son and successor,

ROBERT ORPEN, Esq., appears by an inquisition, dated in 1661, to have resided at a place called Nefiaherolin (sometimes named Killorglin) in the co. Kerry. He m. Lucy Chichester, and had issue, I. RICHARD, his heir; II. Robert, who returned to England, and, it is said, died there; I. Rachael, m. to John Mayberry, Esq; II. Dorcas, m. to Francis Crumpe, Esq.; III. RICHARD ORPEN, Esq., J.P. of the White House, Kerry, a captain in the army, was the first of the family who settled on the river Kenmare. He acquired very considerable property, and, from his activity and determined courage, appears to have taken the lead amongst the protestant settlers in that part of Kerry. In 1688, after the abdication of the English throne by JAMES II, Mr. Orpen garrisoned his house at Killowen, and received into it all the neighbouring protestant families; but Capt. Phelim M'Carthy, with three thousand Irish soldiers, appearing before the gates of the garrison, the besieged, after some time, and when no hope remained of succour, surrendered. Mr. Orpen effected his escape to England, and returned the following year as a commissary with the rank of captain in the army of King WILLIAM. He fought at the Boyne; and soon after retired with his family to Killowen, having been appointed a magistrate for Kerry. He m. Isabella, dau. of the Rev. Thomas Palmer, and had issue, Lineage.—The late MISS ANN ORRED, of Weston and Runcorn, who d. 13 Sept. 1852, at the advanced age of eighty-eight, was the eldest and last surviving dau. of John Orred, Esq. of Weston and Runcorn, by Jane, his wife, dau. and co-heiress of Matthew Alcock, Esq. of Runcorn, and granddau. of George Orred, Esq. of Tranmore, in the same county, by his second marriage with Ann, dau. and co-heiress of John Fletcher, Esq. This lady was the last representative of the second branch of the Orred family, which is of Saxon descent, and has been for four centuries, and probably for a much longer period, settled in Wirral, in the co. of Chester, deriving in a direct line from Henry Orred, who appears in the family records as settled in Wirral, in the reign of HENRY VII. Lancaster (descended from a younger branch of the Woodvilles, formerly of Grafton, co. Northampton, one of whom, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Richard Woodville, 1st Earl Rivers, and widow of Sir John Grey de Groby, m. King EDWARD IV). This gentleman, upon the decease of the above-mentioned lady, now represents the united landed property of the family.

STANLEY ORRED, Esq. of Stourton, co. Chester, b. 17 March, 1674, lord of the manor of Tranmore (son of Daniel Orred, Esq. of Stourton, and sixth in descent from Henry Orred, living temp. HENRY VIII), d. 24 Feb. 1728, leaving, by Elizabeth, his 2nd wife, dau. of Smyth, of Wirrall, a son, Crest—A hare, saltant, ppr., bearing in its mouth three ears of corn, or.

In early times the Orreds were settled in that part of the county of Chester which was the appanage of the ancient Barons de Montalt, one of whose strongholds was Hawarden, anciently written Haurthene. Thus, in all probability, originated the Orred crest of the hare saltant, which was the cognizance of Radulphus de Haurthene, A.D. 1286, as appears from his seal. The three ears of corn are, doubtless, in heraldic allusion to the coat of arms of their feudal lord, Randall, 3rd Earl of Chester, whose ensigns were, "AZ., three garbs, or."

Lineage.—In Dugdale's Monasticon, we find TORALDUS DE PAPILLON one of the witnesses to a deed of confirmation granted by WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR to the church of Durham.

In the reign of King JOHN,

RALPH PAPILLON was elected abbot of Westminster; and in the reign of EDWARD I, WILLIAM PAPILLON, one of the King's most devoted servants, was recommended by his royal master, in the 31st year of his reign, to the abbot and convent of Leicester, for a corrody from that house. This William Papillon is supposed to have founded the family of Papillon, of Lubenham, in Leicestershire. His nephew and heir was ROGER PAPILLON.

ANTHONY PAPILLON, the friend of Erasmus, and one of the most distinguished of the Huguenots in France, held an office at the court of FRANCIS I, and enjoyed, in an eminent degree, the favour and protection of the pious Margaret of Valois. He d. suddenly in 1525, not without the suspicion of poison, leaving a son, also a champion of the Reformation, who fell on St. Bartholomew's Day, 1572. He was father of

THOMAS PAPILLON, gentleman of the bedchamber to HENRY IV of France, who left the service of that monarch on his renouncing the Protestant faith. He m. 12 Aug. 1572, Jane Veuve de la Pierre, and by her, who was drowned in her passage from France, he had issue,

I. Eliza-Ives, m. to James Wintle, Esq. of The Hill House, Newnham, Gloucestershire, only son of the late James Wintle, Esq. of Saint Bridge, near Gloucester, J.P. and D.L. for the co. of Gloucester.

Lineage.—This is a branch of the old Gloucestershire family of that name mentioned by Atkyns, Rudder, Fosbrooke and Bigland, in their histories of that county as seized in 1608, of Down Hatherley, Side at Leckhampton, and several other manors in the co. of Gloucester, and as long settled at Wishanger, in the parish of Miserden, at their manor house there situated, now possessed by Julius Partridge, Esq., a lineal descendant (vide pedigree registered at the College of Arms). The manor and estates of Wishanger have been for several centuries the property and residence of the Partridge family. Wishanger manor house is of great antiquity, it was re-edified and the present porch erected in the year 1578, by Robert Partridge, Esq., who m. Anne, dau. of John Ernle, or Ernley, Esq. of Cannings, co. Wilts. Robert Partridge erected the arms which still remain carved in stone over the front entrance, one of the coats of Partridge impaling the arms of Ernle. The ancient sun dial over the arms was erected at the same time. The early history of the Partridge or Partrige family is collected from the records of landed property and historical and other notices occurring in ancient chronicles and state documents. It appears that the first settlement of the family in England occurred in the reign of Henry II, when "Partridge the Norman," as he is called in the grant from the crown, migrated into England from Normandy as a military adventurer and re-celved a grant of the borough of Maldon in Essex, from that King in return for military services rendered in the wars between STEPHEN and Matilda, circ. 1153 (vide MORT's History of Essex, vol. i, p 331, and other authorities). This Robert Partridge gave half of the borough of Maldon to a hospital in Normandy, the master whereof exchanged it with the Bishop of London for lands the bishop held in Normandy. The deed of exchange reciting the facts was in existence in the chartulary of the Bishop of London at the close of the last century. The family next settled near Kendal in Westmoreland. Numerous notices of the family during their short residence near Kendal occur in the Harleian MSS., in the British Museum, in the record of the College of Arms, and in other historical works. From Kendal they removed into Gloucestershire; the precise date of their removal is unknown, but John Partridge was of Leonard Stanley soon after the year 1360, and he stands third in the pedigree at the College of Arms which commences with ROGER PARTRIDGE, of Kendal, and John was s. by his son WILLIAM, who m. into the family of the Fowlers of Stroud. WILLIAM PARTRIDGE possessed many important estates in addition to the following manors enumerated in the post mortem Inquisition, viz., Ampney St. Mary, Beddington, Bourton-on-the-Water, North Cerney, Alveston, Wishanger, Syde, Hurdcote, Wythie Bridge, Heyden, and Hardwicke. East Greenwich in Kent, and Hedington in Wilts. William Partridge was elected M.P. for Rochester, 14 ELIZABETH A.D. 1572. MILES PARTRIDGE, who accompanied the Duke of Somerset in the expedition to Scotland, was knighted after a battle fought at Pinkie in 1547, 1 EDWARD VI, and the second paternal coat borne by the Partridges, is said to have been granted to Sir Miles Partridge on this occasion. A courtier and a soldier, he had entered too deeply into the amusements of the Court during the previous reign, and it is recorded of him that he won at a game at hazard, of HENRY VIII, the bells called Jesus Bells, the tower whereon they hung, and the image of St. Paul at the top of the spire, all belonging to St. Paul's Cathedral. One hundred pounds (a large stake in those days) was staked against the tower and bells, Sir Miles being the winner, pulled them down and removed them. (Vide DUGDALE's History of St. Paul's Cathedral, STOW's Survey, MALCOLM's London, &c.) He served the office of high sheriff for the co. Gloucester, and received a grant of the manor of Almondsbury from HENRY VIII. Sir Miles possessed the great messuage called Kew, in the parish of Martlake, Surrey (STRYPE's Eccles). He was one of the intimate friends of the unfortunate Duke of Somerset, and was apprehended with the Duchess of Somerset, soon after the Duke's fall, and was executed on the 26 Feb. 1552.

WILLIAM PARTRIDGE, of Wishanger, 4th in the registered pedigree, d. 20 ELIZABETH 1578, seized of numerous manors and estates as before mentioned.

Lineage.—The family of Pauncefote, whose surname has been at different periods variously written, is of great antiquity and knightly pre-eminence in this kingdom, BERNARD PAUNCEVOTE being mentioned in Domesday Book as a considerable proprietor at Festerfield, in Wiltshire, and in the hundred of Sunburne, in Hampshire, and as holding of the king in capite.
RICHARD PAUNCEFOTE obtained from HENRY III. in the 33rd year of his reign, a grant of the manor of Hasfield, in the co. Gloucester, and according to Camden, "built a fair house at this Hasfield, called Pauncefote Court, and his ancestors were possessed of fair lands there in the CONQUEROR'S time." This estate was transmitted in uninterrupted succession to his posterity until the beginning of the 17th century. He had issue by Isabel his wife,
SIR GRIMBALD PAUNCEFOTE, Knt., who m. Sibilla, dau. and heiress of the lord of the manor of Crickhowell, co. Brecon, by which connection that estate was brought into and long afterwards possessed by the family of Pauncefote. In Robert of Gloucester's account of the taking of Gloucester Castle from Sir Piers Mace, this Sir Grimbald is often mentioned, and is said to have been knighted by Sir Edward Bohun, and to have received also from that warrior the lioncels, a part of his armorial bearings. The early history and pedigree of the family are to be found in Collections relating to the Family of Pauncefote, Lambeth Pal. Lib., MS. 1221, Genealogical Notices of the Family of Pauncefote, by Sir George Pauncefote, Bart., also in RUDDER'S Gloucestershire, and ATKYN'S Gloucestershire, tit. "Pauncefote of Preston."

He afterwards resumed the surname of BROMLEY, which has been retained by his issue (see SIR HENRY BROMLEY, BART.) Under his will, however, the estate of Preston Court devolved upon his cousin, Robert Smith, Esq. of Worcester Coll. Oxford (a son of Thomas Smith, Esq. of Gealing Hall, Notts, and Foelalt, co. Cardigan, who was high sheriff for the latter co. in 1807), together with the surname and arms of PAUNCEFOTE, confirmed to him by royal licence dated 13 Dec. 1808. This Lineage.—In the original charter of Henry de Lacy to Denbigh, of about the year 1284 (Archæologia Cambrensis, 1855) he confirms his gift and grant to Thomas del Peke of "un burgage en Dynebieghe dedenz les murs, et un curtilage od les apurtenaunces en Dyneb egho dehors les murs;" and to Raufe del Peke, the same; to be held on condition that they or heirs, or English assigns "demorauntz" i Denbigh, shall each find "un homme defensable" within the walls to guard and defend the "Ville," and pay "un denor a Noel en noun de Housgable." &c. In the "Extent of Denbigh," A.D. 1334 (Harl. MSS. 3,632) Ricardus del Peek & Thomas filius Ricardi, & Rogerus, hold iu "Llewony" about seventy-three acres, paying about £4. Richard having leave to build a fulling mill, "super terram suam propriam," and to cut timber for that purpose. It is stated in the Harl. MS. No. 1933 (which agrees with the Harl. MSS. Nos. 1370, 1441), that this family came into Wales in the year 1283, with King EDWARD I, and it is said in Pennant's "Tour in Wales" (vol. ii. p. 173) that they were brought over by Henry de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln. As Llewennie was within De Lacy's Lordship of Denbigh, and as a fee-farm rent was always paid to the Crown, it is highly probable that the lands of Llewennie, which have been held by the Peakes for many centuries, and which are now possessed by their representative, were granted to their ancestors by that nobleman.

Lineage.—The family of Peareth, i. e. De Penreth (the ancient mode of spelling the name) were for centuries resident in Cumberland. A branch was settled in King Henry II's reign, at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and in 1174, Sir John de Penrith, Knt., was slain at the battle of Tynebridge (fought with the Scotch). Leland, in his account of this battle says, "Sir John De Penreth (a young gentleman of the King's Chamber) was sore wounded, and being borne down in the press, perished from loss of blood, and lack of helpe."

In 1320, John De Penrith was one of the three Lords Wardens of the Marches of Scotland. To him the following extract from the Exchequer Records refers: "Paid the Friars of St. Augustine, Newcastle, at the obsequies of Sir John de Penrith, Kt., by ye King's Commandment made on ye day of his burial in ye church of ye Augustines at Newcastle, in wax lights, oblations, and necessary expences about ye said Body, by Sir William Kirkly, Clerk of the Exchequer, 7*l.* 2*s.* 9*d.* and ye said were placed about ye body of ye said Sir John de Penryth, in ye said church of Augustine Friers—one cloth of gold of Lucca, and one other cloth of gold painted on canvass."

In 1345, Robert Muschove de Penreth was bailiff of Newcastle; in 1392, John De Penreth, Bailiff of York, and in 1419, John De Penreth, one of the two members of Parliament returned for the city of York. On several occasions after, we find the office of sheriff of Newcastle filled by members of the Penreth family. In 1489, Edward De Penreth paid a rent of 8*s.* 4*d.* a year for a house in Newcastle, to the memory of St. Bartholomew. Margaret De Penreth, late a nun of St. Bartholomew nunnery, is returned as receiving 2*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* annuity from the Crown, 1 June, 1512, 3rd of King Henry VIII; and in 1560, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, "An house in ye most market, belonging to William De Penreth (Peareth) ye site of which is now lost, paid an annual rent to ye Chauntry of the Chapel of Our Ladye, in Long Benton Church."

Hercules Peareth, who m. 1576, Elizabeth French, had one son,

Mr. Thursby-Pelham assumed the latter surname by royal licence in 1852 on succeeding to the Cound estate.

Lineage.—The surname of Pelham was assumed from a lordship in Herefordshire, where anciently stood a castle, the owner of which, in 1265, was amerced in the then very large sum of forty pounds, for a contempt, in not coming to an inquest to be taken concerning a trespass of the Mint. This lordship of Pelham is recorded to be part of the possessions of WALTER DE PELHAM, in 21 EDWARD I, and it is believed that his ancestors held it prior to the Conquest. From the earliest period, it is certain that the family enjoyed very high consideration; and its members have, in different reigns, distinguished themselves as warriors and statesmen. The Pelhams of Crowhurst and Cound, were a younger branch of the Pelhams of Laughton and Stanmer, ancestors of the Earls of Chichester.

who m. Agnes, dau. of Sir John Lowther, Knt. of Lowther, in the same co., ancestor to the Earl of Lonsdale. A village, however, of the same name as the family exists near Penrith, in the parish of Greystock, whence it may be reasonably inferred that they were settled at the place called Penruddocke long before they took up their abode at Arkelby. This would only be in accordance with the prevailing custom of those days, when families took their names from manorial possessions.

From ROBERT and GEORGE PENRUDDOCKE—the two sons of Edward, who m. the dau. of Robert Highmore in the co. of Cumberland—the family afterwards came to be divided into two branches, distinguished respectively as the PENRUDDOCKES of Hale (Hampshire), and the PENRUDDOCKES of Compton Chamberlayne (Wiltshire). The Hale branch became extinct by the death, without issue, of Charles, Edward, and George, of Chalk, when the estate descended to Elizabeth, wife of Joseph Gage. Sir John Penruddocke lies buried in the church at Hale, with this quaint inscription on a brass plate, with arms and quarters: "Fui quod es; quod sum eris. A.D. 1600." In a vellum roll, containing the notitia of Salisbury, we find the following curious memorandum: "A.D. 1585. The King of Portugal came to Sarum, and was lodged at Mr. Penruddocke's, at which time Mrs. Penruddocke was delivered of a son and daughter, and the King was godfather to them." The King of Portugal here alluded to was, in all probability, Antonio, Prior of Crato, who got himself proclaimed King of Portugal, but was dethroned, about 1580, by Philip II, King of Spain. We are told he visited both France and England. The immediate ancestor of the Wiltshire family, SIR EDWARD PENRUDDOCKE, Knt. of Compton Chamberlayne, eldest son of George Penruddocke, standard bearer, under the Earl of Pembroke, at the battle of St. Quintin's, temp. Queen MARY, m. Mary, dau. and heir of George Massey, Esq. of Puddington, co. Chester, and had, with other issue, a dau., Dorothy, wife of Alexander Thistlethwaite, Esq. of Winterslow, Wilts, and a son and heir,

PERRIER OF CORK.

Lineage.—This family derives descent from one of the ancient houses of the haute noblesse of France, Du Perrier of Brittany, province of Leon. The proofs exist in the archives of the French nobility, deposited in the Collége Héraldique de France, Paris. The Commandeur Comte De Magny, secrétaire archiviste of that college, writing to a member of this family in 1843, states, first, "La famille Du Perrier est des plus anciennes en Bretagne, et les documens que nous avons, la feraient remonter au dixième siecle, et la feraient descendre des anciens ducs et princes de Bretagne. J'ai trouvé celui des Du Perrier qui ayant embrassé les erreurs de Calvin (c'est ainsi que s'exprime le document) aurait perdu ses biens, et aurait été obligé de s'expatrier." And further, "Vous n'avez pas besoin de vous préoccuper d'aucunes recherches quant à l'existence de votre famille en France. Le collége possède à cet égard les renseignemens les plus complets et les plus étendus, jusqu'à l'émigration de l'un des votres, par suite des troubles religieux; puis, pour les branches qui sont restées en France; jusqu'à temps même de notre première revolution de 1789." The member here alluded to, MARK DU PERRIER, having, under the pressure of the religious troubles unhappily prevailing in France during the 17th century, passed over to Ireland, finally emigrated with his family thither about 1685, on the revocation of the edict of Nantes, and was the patriarch of the Irish branch "Perrier," the prefix "Du" having, as in many instances of similar distinctives amongst the French religious refugees of the period, been discontinued in this case on the death of the son ANTOINE DU PERRIER, a cavalry field officer in the army of Queen ANNE, who fell at Malplaquet, leaving a son, JOHN PERRIER, Esq. of Dublin, who d. Dec. 1737, leaving issue of his marriage with Louisa De la Maziere, an eldest son,

Lineage.—A Norman knight, of the name of Fitz-Ansr, who accompanied WILLIAM, Duke of Normandy, into England, at the time of the CONQUEST, received from the CONQUEROR a grant of several manors in the Isle of Wight, as may be seen by a reference to "Domesday Book." In the reign of HENRY I, we find these same manors in possession of one JORDAN DE INSULA, or DE LISLE, and from the said Jordan de Insula, the present family of Lisle Phillipps are lineally descended, as the following pedigree will show. Jordan de Insula had issue,

I. GALFRIDE DE INSULA, his heir.
II. Brian de Insula, appointed Lord Chief Forester of England, 1220, temp. HENRY III. quelled an insurrection of rebellious Barons, took the Castle of Mount Sorrell, co. Leicester, received the manors of Loughbro' and Beaumanor from HENRY III, had several high honours bestowed on him by the King, and at one time he was the most powerful subject in the realm. He m. Matilda, dau. and heiress of William de Selcby, by whom he had issue, three daus. He d. 1234.

The eldest son,

GALFRIDE DE INSULA, Lord of Wodyton, in the Isle of Wight, temp. HENRY III; m. and had issue one son,

I. Elionora-Lisle, m. John Kingston, Esq.

The son,

SIR JOHN LISLE, Knight, was Lord of Wodyton and Thruxton. When, in May, 1520, the Emperor CHARLES V arrived suddenly in the harbour of Hithe, Sir John Lisle was sent by HENRY VIII to meet him, and to conduct him in state to Canterbury, where the two sovereigns met and remained four days. Sir John Lisle then accompanied HENRY VIII to France, where he entered the lists of the celebrated tournaments of the field of the Cloth of Gold, as one of the twenty-one knights chosen to represent, on that occasion, the chivalry of England. Sir John Lisle m. the dau. and heiress of Sir John Courtenay, Knight Banneret, and d. 1524, without issue. The elder branch, therefore, of the Lisles became extinct in him. ii. John brought up to the law, joined the Republican party under Cromwell, appointed by him one of the two judges during the trial of Charles I, made a joint Commissioner of the Great Seal, Chief Judge of the High Court of Justice, and lastly, created a Peer. After the Restoration, 1660, a price being set on his head, he left the Kingdom, and lived in retirement in Switzerland; but, being traced to Vevay, he was there assassinated, 1667, as it was supposed, by some Court emissary. He had m. Alice, dau. and heiress of Sir White Becanaw, Knight, of Moyles Court, co. Hants. This lady was a stanch royalist, and exceedingly regretted the political views of her husband. When John Lisle fled to the Continent, she accompanied him, but after his assassination she returned to England, and she continued living at Moyles Court with her daughters. Her only son was in the King's army. Unfortunately for her, two Dissenters, after the battle of Sedgemoor, took refuge at Moyles Court, where she gave them shelter. Being discovered, she was brought to to trial under the infamous Judge Jeffries, and by his orders, at the age of 80, was beheaded, 2 Sept., 1685. Her property was confiscated, but after the Revolution, 1688, was restored to her son. He had issue,

Lineage.—The constant tradition of this family has been that they descend from a younger branch of the house of Picton; but after much laborious investigation, nothing has been ascertained capable of throwing any light on the point in question. That they are of Welsh origin is, however, certain, it having been proved, by family evidences still in existence, that they were possessed of lands in the parish of Disserth, in Radnorshire, about the middle of the reign of ELIZABETH, whence, later in the same reign, they removed into Herefordshire, still retaining possession of the Radnorshire property till the middle of the last century, when the estates called Upper and Lower Kilgainvin, in that parish, were disposed of in 1753, by Thomas Phillipps, Esq. The first settler in Herefordshire,

OWEN PHILLIPPS, of the city of Hereford, younger brother of John Phillipps, of Kilgainvin, in the parish of Disserth, Radnorshire, held lands in Disserth about the year 1595. By Joan, his wife (whose will, dated 19 April, 1639, was proved 16 July, 1641) he had, with other issue, a son, Lineage.—The Poleys are of remote antiquity in the county of Suffolk. About the reign of EDWARD III, or RICHARD II, they left their residence in Hertfordshire, which, according to the custom of those times, had a similar name, and went into Suffolk, where, their seats being fixed at Boxted and Badley, the foundation of two flourishing families was laid, as appears from writings belonging to Boxted Manor, from family records, and a pedigree well attested. Sir Humphrey de Poley, who lived in 1107, 7th HENRY I, as appears from a MS. de nobilitate, heretofore in possession of Sir Symons D'Ewes, bore "Arg., on a bend, gu., three cross-crossiets, or;" to which was afterwards added, "On a canton, or, a lion, rampant, sable." The ancient bearing was subsequently discontinued, and the canton assumed as the coat. A mural tablet in Boxted church, records alliances with some of the best families in the county and elsewhere, viz., Clopton, Shaa, Jermyn, D'Ewes, &c.

* In Boxted church there is a monument to SIR JOHN POLEY, of Wrongey, who d. in 1638, with his statue, standing upright, larger than life, in armour. It is remarkable for having a gold frog suspended from the left ear. There is also a very handsome monument of black oak to Sir John's uncle, WILLIAM POLEY, and his wife, ALICE SHAA. The figures are recumbent, as large as life, very finely executed, and quite perfect. At Boxted Hall is a portrait of Sir John Poley (with the gold frog from his ear), aged 20, 1567. It is stated on the back of the picture, that he was knighted for his services against the Spaniards, when the Duke of Parma besieged Bergem-op-Zoom, in 1588, and that in 1603, he was made col.-gen. over 4000 foot men. Peter Reeves, a man of property, and one of the most respectable inhabitants of Glastonbury, according to the phrase of those times, "lived on his own, and died on his own." The bulk of his possessions devolved on his two eldest sons, Henry and William, whose descendants are now extinct, but a small estate near Hartlake Bridge, in Somersetshire, was inherited by his 3rd son,

Lineage.—This family, the only one of the name in England, is of French extraction. Its forefathers were French Protestants, who forsook their native country at the revocation of the edict of Nantes, where, on the banks of the Loire, the Counts Porcher, of Richebourg, the ancestral senior line, till lately existed. Of the name, we find two raised to the French peerage—Stephen Porcher, of Joigny, ennobled by Charles V in 1364, and the above Porchers, of Richebourg. They are traced up to a very ancient date, the originator of the family being Simon le Porcher, hereditary grand huntsman to Hugh Capet, the founder of the French monarchy, from whose official duty of slaying the wounded boar, the name is derived. One of the Protestant branch of the Richebourg line fled into South Carolina, with the descendants of many other French noble houses, viz.,

Isaac Porcher, of Richebourg, doctor of medicine in the University of Paris, who m. Claude Chérigny, of the province of Tourraine, and was father of Lineage.—The family of Portal, or De Portal, were originally Spanish, and established themselves in Languedoc, at the end of the 11th century, having come over in the suite of Elvira, dau. of Alphonso IV, King of Leon and Castille, who m. Raymond de St. Gilles, Comte de Toulouse in 1094, from which time their history has been inseparably associated with that of the city of Toulouse. From the close of the 12th century, we find mention of this family as one of the most distinguished in Languedoc. For upwards of five centuries they continued to fill the highest civil and military offices in that province, and are mentioned in all the histories of their time as having taken a leading part in the cause of the Huguenots, of whom they were firm and zealous adherents.

Oldric de Portallo was "capitoul" of Toulouse in 1204. The "capitouls" had had the supreme administration of Justice, the command of the troops, and the full right to proclaim war, or to conclude treaties of peace, on their own authority. This office, which was the highest in the province, was filled twenty-two times by members of the family of Portal.

PIERRE DE PORTAL was capitoul in 1280-86. He was deputed, together with his brother Vital de Portal, capitoul in 1283, to reduce to writing an account of the laws and constitution of Toulouse, in Latin, that they might be preserved for future generations.

ALARIC DE PORTAL, capitoul in 1295, was the originator of the records of the city of Toulouse, known as the "Annales de l'Hôtel de Ville," in which were preserved the portraits of the capitouls and an account of the principal events which occurred in the city; on its pages were recorded, in 1562, the sentence of death and execution of one of the bravest of his descendants, Antoine de Portal, viguier de Toulouse.

JEAN FRANÇOIS DE PORTAL, the fifteenth in the direct line of descent from Oldric de Portalhac, lived at the Château de la Portalière, near St. Hippolyte, in the Cevennes, and was one of the victims of the religious persecution consequent on the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, being massacred during that brief reign of terror and of bloodshed. After his death, his château was burned, his property was seized, and his children with difficulty escaped his fate. He left issue,

I. HENRY, of whom presently.

II. William, who was saved with his elder brother Henri, and was sent over with him to England. He entered into holy orders, was appointed tutor to King GEORGE III, and was afterwards presented to the livings of Clowne, in Derbyshire, and of Farnbridge, in Essex. He d. in 1760, leaving issue.

III. Pierre de Portal, who made his escape from the Château de la Portalière immediately after the murder of his father. He m. Isabeau d'Astorg, and from this marriage, third in the direct line, descended Pierre-Barthelemy de Portal, b. 31 Oct. 1765, who was appointed "maître des requêtes" in 1811, by Napoleon; and, after the restoration of the Bourbons in 1815, "conseiller d'état;" he was created Baron de Portal, pair de France, and chevalier de la Légion d'Honneur. At the congress of Paris, on 20 Nov. of that year, he, with Baron Dudon, signed the treaty of general peace, on behalf of the King of France. In 1817, he was appointed minister of the colonies, and shortly afterwards minister of marine, and "grand officier de la Légion d'Honneur;" and in 1823 he received the dignity of the grand cross of the Legion of Honour. He had issue, 1 Pierre-Paul-Frederic, Baron Portal, b 5 Nov. 1804, appointed in 1824, attaché to the French embassy at the court of Saxony, and afterwards to the court of St. Petersburg; "maître des requêtes" in 1832; in 1838, he received the cross of the Legion of Honour; 1 Adele, m. to Le Marquis d'Escayrac-Lauture; 2 Lucie, m. to Le Marquis d'Audiffret.

I. Mary, m. to M. le Normant, of Amsterdam.

The eldest son of Jean-Francois de Portal,

HENRI PORTAL, b. at the Château de la Portalière, contrived, after the death of his father, to escape to England in safety, and settled, eventually, at Freefolk Priors, in Hampshire. PRINGLE OF YAIR.

Pringle, Alexander, Esq. of Yair, co. Selkirk, b. 13 March, 1837.

Lineage.—The name of Pringle (or Hop-Pringle, as in ancient times it was more frequently, though not uniformly, written) is peculiar to the southern counties of Scotland, where it is met with amongst the landed proprietors from an early period. As to its etymology, there is a general agreement amongst antiquaries that it is a corruption of Pelerin, or Pilgrim, the prefix Hop being synonymous with the British Ap, or Irish O, signifying son or descendant. Hop-Pringle may, therefore, have meant the son of the Pilgrim, and was probably assumed at the time when pilgrimages to the Holy Land conferred renown on those who successfully accomplished them. It may be added, in further confirmation of this, that the pilgrim badge, the scallop-shell, forms a part of the armorial bearings of all the families of the name.

Of these families there were two races in the south of Scotland, probably sprung from a common ancestor, but as their connection could not be traced, each was accustomed to claim precedency, though they appear to have been at all times in friendly alliance with each other. The Pringles of Torsonce, on Gala Water, were the head of one race, settled in Mid-Lothian, and the adjoining portions of East-Lothian and Berwickshire. To them belonged the families of Burnhouse, Hawtree, and Glengelt, and those of Rowchester, and Lees, down in the Merse. Their main line failed on the death of John Pringle, of Torsonce, in 1738, when his estates went into the Stichill family, through his only dau., Margaret, who married Gilbert Pringle, one of that family, but had no children. John Pringle, of Lees, then became heir-male, but that race have also failed, and it is not known by whom they are now represented.

The other race were the descendants of the Pringles of Whitsun, in Berwickshire, afterwards designed, sometimes of Smailholm, and sometimes of Galashiels. Their lands lay chiefly in the lower parts of Gala Water, and on Caddon Water, in Selkirkshire, and in various parts of Roxburghshire, especially near the Cheviot Border.

The earliest notice that has been traced of this family is in the chartulary of the abbey of Soltray, where

Robert Hop-Pringle, of Whitsun, is mentioned in a donation to the monastery, confirmed by King Alexander III. Another

Robert Hop-Pringle, of Whitsun, was present as squire (scutifer) to James, Earl of Douglas, at the battle of Otterburne, in 1388, and got from Archibald, Earl of Douglas, a charter of the lands of Smailholm, in Roxburghshire, in 1408. This Robert Pringle built the tower of Smailholm, and having dropped the designation of Whitsun, he assumed that of Smailholm, by which his descendants were afterwards generally distinguished, and occasionally by that of Galashiels, from their Ettrick Forest lands. He afterwards accompanied his patron, Archibald, the fourth Earl of Douglas, and Duke of Turenne, on his famous expedition into France, where they both lost their lives at the battle of Verneuil, in 1424. By his wife Isabella he left a son and successor,

Robert Pringle, of Smailholm. He had various charters of the family estates, and amongst them one of Smailholm, in 1451. He m. Elizabeth Dishington, dau. of Sir William Dishington, of Ardross, in Fife, whose progenitor, Sir William Dishington, had m. one of the sisters of King Robert Bruce, and had four sons and three daus. The eldest son,

David Pringle, of Smailholm, first ranger of the Ward of Tweed, and as such enjoyed the lands of Redhead and Whythank; he was father of

DAVID, his heir.

In the parliament of 1633, he was chosen representative for the co. of Selkirk, along with George Pringle, of Torwoodlee. His younger brother, ROBERT PRINGLE, of Howlatstown, was the last male descendant of the senior line.

JAMES PRINGLE, of Woodhouse and Whytbank, son of David Pringle, of Smailholm, by his 2nd marriage with Margaret Lundie. He accompanied his sovereign, JAMES V, to the battle of Solway Moss, in 1542, where he was taken prisoner, but afterwards liberated on paying a ransom of 400 merks sterling. He m. Margaret Kerr, of Linton, and by her, who m. 2ndly, Sir David Home, of Wedderburn, and d. 1580, had four sons and a dau. James Pringle d. before 1567, and was s. by his eldest son,

JAMES PRINGLE, of Woodhouse and Whytbank, a great loyalist, who attached himself to the cause of Queen MARY, for which he suffered many hardships and losses, including his Peebleshire estate. He was twice m.; 1st, in 1566, to Marion Murray, only dau. of Andrew Murray, of Blackbarony, by his first marriage with Elizabeth Lockhart, of Lee, who d. in 1592; and 2ndly, in 1605, to Juliane Home, dau. of Sir David Home, of Wedderburn, who had been previously m. to Sir John Kerr, of Hirsel and Littledean. By the 2nd marriage he had no issue, but by the first he had two sons,

I. JAMES, apparent of Whytbank.
II. Robert.

James Pringle survived his eldest son, but had d. some time before 1622. His son,

JAMES PRINGLE, younger, of Whytbank, m. 1592, Christian, dau. of William Lundie, of that ilk, by whom he had several children,

I. JAMES, afterwards of Whytbank, M.P. for Selkirkshire, a devoted loyalist, heavily fined by the parliament. On the extinction of the direct line of the Pringles of Galashiels and Smailholm, at the death of Robert Pringle, of Howlatstown, in 1653, he became their male representative, and assumed their arms, without a difference, by authority of the Lord Lyon. PRINGLE OF CLIFTON, AND PRINGLE OF HAINING.

PRINGLE, MARGARET-VIOLET, of Haining, co. Selkirk, s. her brother, the late Robert Pringle, Esq. of Clifton, in 1841 ; m. Archibald Douglas, Esq. of Adderston, and has an only dau.,

ANNE-ELIZABETH PRINGLE-DOUGLAS, m. to Mr. Pattison.

Lineage.—In the southern parts of the co. of Roxburgh, and chiefly on the River Kale, there have been several families of the name of PRINGLE, holding land since the 15th century. There were Pringles of Hownam, of Tofts, of the Bents, of Aikhope, and others, at this early period. There is reason to believe that most, if not all, were descended from the Smailholm family, though it is doubtful if there are now any means of tracing the connection. MARK PRINGLE, in Sprouston, "servitor to the Earl of Roxburgh," acquired early in the 17th century, Easter Clifton. Though he is styled servitor to the Earl of Roxburgh he appears to have been a person of some wealth and consequence. He m. Janet, sister of Mr. William Bennet, parson of Ancrum (whose son, Sir William Bennet, was the 1st baronet of the Grubet family), and had two sons and two daus. Mark Pringle d. in 1644, and was, s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT PRINGLE, designed of Clifton. In 1660, he m. Christian, dau. of Sir Walter Murray, of Livinston, who was brother to Patrick, the 1st Lord Elibank. They had one only dau., Janet, who m. her cousin, Robert, son of Andrew Pringle. Robert Pringle, of Clifton was s. by his brother,

ANDREW PRINGLE, of Clifton. He m. Violet, dau of John Rutherford, of Edgerston, by his wife, Barbara Abernethy, a dau. of the Bishop of Caithness, and had

I. ROBERT, his heir. II. JOHN, of Haining.
III. MARK, of Crichton.
I. Barbara, the eldest dau., m. Sir James Naesmyth, of Posso.

Andrew Pringle d. in 1702, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT PRINGLE, of Clifton, who m. 1st, 1687, his cousin, Janet, only dau. of his uncle, Robert Pringle, of Clifton, by which marriage all the family estates were united. They had one son, and several daus., of whom the eldest m. Robert Elliot, of Harwood. His 2nd wife was Margaret, eldest dau. of George Rutherfurd, of Fairnington, by a dau. of Haliburton, of Newmains. He d. about the year 1755, and was s. by his only son,

ROBERT PRINGLE, of Clifton, who d. sæm. in 1780, and was s. by his cousin, JOHN PRINGLE, of Haining, 2nd son of his uncle,

JOHN PRINGLE, 2nd son of Andrew Pringle, of Clifton, by Violet Rutherfurd. In 1702 he purchased the estate of Haining, in the co. of Selkirk. In 1729, on the death of Lord Poncaitland, he was raised to the bench, by the title of Lord Haining. He m. Ann, eldest dau. of Sir James Murray, of Philiphaugh, and had three sons and three daus. Lord Haining d. in 1754, at the age of 79. His eldest son,

ANDREW PRINGLE, an eminent and eloquent advocate at the Scottish bar, was raised to the bench by the title of Lord Alemoor, in 1759, and was at the same time appointed a lord of justiciary. Dying at Hawkhill, in 1776, sæm., he was s. by his next brother, JOHN PRINGLE, of Haining, a merchant in Madeira, who subsequently, and for a long time, represented the co. of Selkirk in parliament. On the death of his cousin, Robert Pringle, of Clifton, in 1780, he was served heir of provision to him, under his entail, and thereafter assumed the designation of PRINGLE of Clifton, with the arms of the elder branch of the family, undifferenced. He never m., and, dying in 1792, was s. by his cousin and grand-nephew, MARK PRINGLE, of Fairnilee, grandson of Mark, 3rd son of Andrew Pringle, of Clifton, to whom we now return.

MARK PRINGLE, was 3rd and youngest son of Andrew Pringle, of Clifton, by Violet Rutherfurd, of Edgerston. On 2 Oct. 1707, the day of the head court at Selkirk, he had a quarrel after dinner with Walter Scott, of Raeburn, and next morning they fought with swords, in a meadow near the town, when Raeburn was unfortunately slain, and Mark Pringle fled the country. He then became a Spanish merchant, and went through many hardships and adventures, in the course of which he was taken captive by the MOORS, and detained by them for a time in slavery. At length, having made a considerable fortune, he returned to his native country and purchased the estate of Crichton, in Mid-Lothian, in 1738. His wife was a dau. of Strachan of Thornton, an ancient family in Kincardineshire ; they had three sons and a dau. : I. JOHN, his heir ; II. Andrew, in the Bombay civil service ; and, III. Mark Pringle d. in 1812, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN PRINGLE, of Clifton, who served in the army of occupation in France. He was for a short time in parliament as member for the Selkirk district of boroughs. He was never m., and was s. by his brother,

ROBERT PRINGLE, of Clifton, 1st designed of Fairnilee, member co. of Selkirk, in the first parliament after the Reform Act. He d. in 1841, when the estate of Clifton passed, under the provisions of the entail, to Robert Elliot, of Harwood, heir of line of the family. PRODGERS OF MONMOUTHSHIRE.

Prodgers, the Rev. Edwin, M.A., rector of Ayott St. Peter's, Welwyn, Herts, b. 1833.

Lineage.—The family of Prodgers, Progers, or Proger, are of Welsh origin, and of great antiquity. We first hear of them as descendants of Jenkin ap Roger, of Gwarindee, whose sons and grandsons called themselves Progers.

Jenkin ap Roger derived from William ap Jenkin, alias Herbert, Lord of Gwarindee, son and heir of John Herbert ap Adam, alias Jenkin, Lord of Gwarindee, who was second son of Adam Fitzlherbert (lord by inheritance from his grandmother of Llan-Howell, or Llanlowell near Usk, and of Betesley, or Beachley) by Christian, his wife, dau. and heir of Gwarin Dee, the black lord of Llandilo. The Progerses were numerous and widely dispersed, but the estate and mansion of Gwarindee continued in their possession till the death of the last male heir, William Progers, who d. about 1780, leaving an only dau., who became a nun.

The only branch now surviving of the same name, settled, as appears from parochial evidence, and testamentary documents at Bromfield, in Shropshire, and were attached by what, in legal parlance is deemed "soccage" to the noble house of Herbert, which removed from Monmouthshire to the part of the country just mentioned, at the commencement of the 17th century.

Lawrence Proger, bapt. in 1637, son of Samuel Proger, who d. in 1661, by Margaret, his wife, d. in 1679, leaving by Joan, his wife (who d. in 1671), a son, Lawrence Prodger, bapt. in 1663, who d. in 1711, leaving a son, John Progers, of Ludlow, bapt. in 1704, who, by Anne his wife, left at his decease in 1770, a son, Edward Prodgers, of Ludlow, bapt. in 1738, who d. in 1819, leaving by Mary his wife (with a dau. Elizabeth), four sons, Giles; Edward; James, d. s. p.; and Rev. III. Alexander-Kennedy, b. 16 Jan. 1854.
IV. Frank-Kennedy, b. 10 May, 1859.

Lineage.—This family is lineally descended from the ancient Scottish House of PURVES OF THAT ILK, which is of great antiquity, members of it having been landed proprietors from time immemorial in the lowlands of Scotland. The first of that name now on record is

WILLIAM PURVOYS DE MOSSPENNOCH, whom we find to have been, in the 12th century, proprietor of the lands of Mosspennoch, lying contiguous to the Abbey of Melrose; and there is still in existence (says Nisbet), and in the custody of the Court of Session in Scotland, a charter of the above William Purvoys de Mosspennoch, bearing his seal, by which deed he grants to the monks of the Abbey, a right of way through his lands of Mosspennoch. This charter is dated towards the end of the reign of WILLIAM, THE LION, King of Scotland.

Sir George Mackenzie fancied that the Purvesses must have come originally from France, where, he says, their name was Purvoir, referring to the muscles they bear in their arms, as representing mirrors. They would thus be of Norman descent, having probably come to this country with William, Duke of of Normandy; but Nisbet does not agree with him in this supposition. Probably from the above is descended Alan

* William Purton was the first who changed the orthography of his name from Perton to Purton, for what reason is unknown.

Lineage.—The family of PYE, one of most honourable and ancient extractions, was originally AP HUGH, the letter U in the Welsh language bearing the sound of Y.

HUGH PYE, or APHUGH (presumed to have been a son of the William Ap Hugh who accompanied the Norman in his conquest of England), was lord of Kilpec Castle, in the Mynde Parke, in Herefordshire. He had two sons, viz.: I. THOMAS, whose only child, Margaret, m. Stephen de la Beare; II. JOHN. From the 2nd son,

JOHN PYE, descended, in a direct male line, the PYES OF THE MYNDE, and of Kilpec Castle, co. Hereford, whose representative in the senior line, SIR WALTER PYE, of the MYNDE, retired to the Continent with the STUARTS, and obtained the title of Lord Kilpec.

SIR ROBERT PYE, Knt. (2nd son of William Pye, Esq. of the Mynde, and Kilpec Castle), auditor of the receipt of the exchequer of King JAMES I and CHARLES I, purchased of the Untons, the manor and estate of Farringdon, in Berks, and during the civil wars garrisoned his mansion there, for the royalists, when it was stoutly besieged by his own son, Sir Robert Pye. 1. MARY PYE being the last heiress of this line, devised her estates to General Severne, her cousin, for life, with remainder to her first cousin (once removed), Richard Watkins, whose son, Charles, inheriting in tail and having no issue, cut off the entail, and after giving his uncle, John, a life interest, left the remainder to the present Henry-John Pye, Esq., representative of the senior branch of the Pyes.

Sir Robert Pye was s. by his eldest son,

SIR ROBERT PYE, Knt. of Farringdon, member for Woodstock in the Long Parliament, and col. of horse in Gen. Fairfax's regiment. He engaged in an attempt to restore King CHARLES II, and was committed to the Tower for a breach of privilege, in presenting a petition from the co. of Berks, complaining of the want of a settled form of government. Upon General Monk's coming to London, the secluded members passed a vote to relieve Pye from prison, who, upon the restoration, was nominated equerry to the king. PYNE OF CURRY MALLETT.

PYNE, JOHN, Esq. of Curry Mallett, co. Somerset, major, late in the Bengal army, b. 18 Jan. 1795.

Lineage.—The family of Pyne, which possesses, by direct inheritance through the male line, property in Curry Mallett and Abbot's Isle, in Somersetshire, is of considerable antiquity.

In a document furnished from the Herald's College, dated 1573, and signed by Cooke, Clarenceux, now in possession of Major John Pyne, "John Pyne, of Merriott, in the county of Somerset," who d. at his house, at Curry Mallett, in the said co., in 1609, is styled, "of ancient and honourable family, long time bearing arms;" and in one of the last surveys of the co., from the Herald's office, the family is traced from the time of RICHARD II down to Col. John Pyne, of Curry Mallett, who d. there in 1679, being grandson of John Pyne, of Merriott, as may be seen by a reference to the Harleian MSS. in the British Museum, No. 1145, Vol. CCXI, CCXII.

JOHN PYNE, of Merriott, in the co. of Somerset, who d. at Curry Mallett, 25 Dec. 1609, m. Juliana, dau. of John Towse, of Swill, by Agnes, dau. of Thomas Kewton. She d. 22 May, 1628, having borne him ten children, of whom

THOMAS PYNE, the eldest son and heir, d. before his father, in the year 1629, having m. in 1595, Amey, dau. of Thomas Hanham, serjeant-at-law, of Wimborne Minster, in Dorsetshire. She d. in 1640. Their only son, JOHN PYNE, s. his grandfather in the year 1629, "being seized in fee of divers manors and lands in several counties," and amongst others, "of the manors of Crewkerne and Little Windsor;" m. Eleanor, dau. and heiress of Sir John Hanham, of the city of London, and of Wimborne, in Dorsetshire, with whom he had a good fortune, and who was seized in fee of divers manors and lands, as heir to her father, then dead. She d. in the year 1662, aged 43, leaving him with four sons and two daus. In 1643 his name appears as a col. of the militia raised for the co. of Somerset, a commissioner for levying taxes for the parliament, and member of the Long Parliament.

Though a strong republican, and an opponent of the Church and churchmen, he withdrew from taking any part as soon as he saw what he thought were the ultimate designs of CROMWELL, and he strongly disapproved of the trial and death of the king. He refused also to join any of the subsequent plots and conspiracies from the death of the PROTECTOR to the restoration of the king. He seems, however, to have been very obnoxious to the royal party at the Restoration, and was one of the twenty persons excepted out of the Act of Oblivion. He succeeded at last in obtaining the pardon of himself and eldest son (then 27 years of age), which was signed at Breda in 1660. His circumstances appear to have been much embarrassed in consequence of the civil wars, and he seems to have sold and encumbered his property to liquidate debts, and perhaps to meet fines and penalties, the consequence of his part in it. In 1668, he m. 2ndly, Amey, dau. of John White, of Thornhull, who d. in 1692, leaving no children. Col. Pyne d. at a very advanced age, in 1679, and was s. by his son, CHARLES, having disinherited his eldest son, John Pyne, who d. unm., at Pitney, in the year 1696, aged 63. At his death he was in possession of an estate at Pitney, inherited from his mother; this he devised by will to Francis, 3rd son of his brother, Charles Pyne, to whom it passed upon the death, in 1698, of the said Francis, aged eight years.

Lineage.—The family is of Norman extraction, and derives from one of the companions in arms of the CONQUEROR. Its ancestors have been long seated in the co. In the conference held at Hampton Court, before King JAMES I in 1603, a Mr. Rabett was one of the seven persons to whom were assigned a new translation of St. Paul's and the other canonical epistles at Westminster.

The present proprietor of the estate has a very ancient sword, with a silver handle and gilt, and embossed with singular devices and which was left by will, in 1702, as an heir-loom to Reginald Rabett, who was afterwards high sheriff in 1737 : it was probably the sword of the sheriff of 1587.

Garbett, R.N.), and as the Bramfield Hall estate was tied up in strict settlement to her for her life, his eldest son, the late REV. REGINALD RABETT, of Bramfield Hall, did not come into possession of his paternal hereditary property till the death of his mother (Mrs. Garbett), 23 Feb. 1832.

During his residency at Bencoolen, Sir Stamford was authorized by Lord Hastings then governor-gen. of India, to found a new colony for the protection of British commerce in the Asiatic seas. The spot he selected for this purpose was Singapore, at the mouth of the straits of Malacca, and the subsequent prosperity of the settlement attests the judgment and ability displayed in its establishment. Lineage.—The patriarch of this ancient house, ROGER DE RAINES, came into England with the CONQUEROR, and had several manors in Essex given to him by WILLIAM. A very full account of the first establishment of this family in England, is given by MORANT, in his History of Essex, under the heads of Missing and Little Rayne. He records that, at the time of the general survey, the whole of Little Raine, belonged to Roger one of WILLIAM'S companions in his conquest "of this kingdom, who took the surname of Raines, or Raneis, from this parish, at which the family resided for ages at or near the manor of Old Hall. Robert, Richard, and William, descendants of Roger de Raines above-mentioned, were brothers. Robert, the eldest, dying without issue, the barony, descended to Richard, who, dying about the end of King JOHN'S reign, left this barony to his three daus. and co-heirs, Alice, Amicia, and John. William continued to reside within this manor, and the barony remained in the family until sold by WALTER, son of GEOFFREY DE RAINES, in the 13th century. Their descendants settled in Bedfordshire and Buckinghamshire, and from them sprung the family of RAYNES, of CLIFTON REYNES (long since extinct), and in Yorkshire from whom sprung the family of Raines of Wyton." THOMAS RAINES, of Patrington, in the East Riding of Yorkshire, who d. 15 March, 1487, derived fifth in descent, having obtained possessions within the ancient territory of "The Clanmaurice," led to an impression that this family had descent from Raymond Le Gros, but at least three hundred years intervene between that first invader of Ireland and the Raymond, who, coming, as we believe, from Northal, in Essex, where traces of the family may still be found, became a settler in Ireland at the end of ELIZABETH'S reign. In 1613–14 we find SAMUEL RAYMOND, a clerk of the "Court of Castle Chamber" (the Irish Star-Chamber); and as such he furnishes the very first entry on the "Irish Commons Journals," as incurring the censure of the House of Commons, for a breach of privilege, in serving law process on the member for Tralee, Mr. Robert Blennerhassett. In the 15th JAMES I (A.D. 1617) SAMUEL RAYMOND had a patent as comptroller of customs at Dingle, in the co. Kerry, and shortly after obtained from the Stack family a grant or conveyance of Ballyloughran, which long continued the residence of the family, though now passed from them. KILMURRAY came into their possession by an after marriage with Frances Harnett, and is now the only remains of an extensive property, which once included chief rents over many estates in Kerry.

SAMUEL RAYMOND, who, in 1614, was, after much discussion, censured by the Irish House of Commons, on the complaint of Mr. Robert Blennerhasset, M.P. for Tralee, for serving him with a subpœna out of the Star-chamber, in contempt of the privileges of the house, left issue, by his wife, Elizabeth Butler, Lineage.—The name of this family variously spelt in old writings, REOD, READ, and READE, is derived from the Saxon word "Redd" or "Reod." I. Anna-Mary-Isabella, m. John-Peter Mulcaster, Esq. of Benwell Park, co. Northumberland, barrister-at-law, J.P.

II. Isabella-Margaret.

Lineage.—The Reeds of Crag are descended from the elder branch of the Reeds of Troughend, who state they hold grants from the crown prior to the Conquest. The Crag (a portion of considerable estates which this family formerly possessed in Redesdale) has descended from father to son from a very remote period. Sir Walter Scott, in a note to his poem of Rokeby, alludes to the great antiquity of the Reed family, having held their lands "for the incredible space of nine hundred years," and refers to an epitaph on a mural slab in Elsdon Church, erected in the year 1758, to the memory of Elrington Reed, which describes the family as having at that time been seated in Redesdale 900 years. In the Muster Roll for Northumberland, temp. HENRY VIII, are found the names of many of the Reeds in Redesdale. The deeds of the Crag property deduce the title long before that period down to the present day.

THOMAS REED, of Aydon, White House, and Crag, s. Ralph Reed, Esq., and Alderman of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. He left an only son, Thomas, and a dau. Ann, who m. William Jobling, Gent. of Brocksbushes, co. Northumberland.

REED OF HEATHPOOL AND HOPPEN.

REED, GEORGE, Esq. late of Hoppen, co. Northumberland, now possessed of landed estates in the co. of York, m. 1837, Mrs. Sarah Scatcherd, of High Harrogate, dau. of Mr. Gath, of Halifax, but by her (who d. 1845) has no issue.

Lineage.—The family of REED, of Troughend, Heathpool, and Hoppen, co. Northumberland, is an ancient clan in Redesdale. In the notes to Rokeby, Sir Walter Scott refers to the traditional story of Percy Rede, of Troughend, who was treacherously slain by the Halls of Girsonfield, and he goes on to say, that "these Redes of Troughend were a very ancient family, as may be conjectured from their deriving their surname from the river on which they had their mansion. An epitaph on one of their tombs affirms that the family held their lands of Troughend, which are situated on the Reed, nearly opposite to Otterburn, for the incredible space of nine hundred years." So early as 1400, Thomas Reed, of Redysdale, occurs in the County Records,* viz., in a bond to William de Swinburne, in the sum of 20*l., to be at Haughton, in Tyndale, for the ransom of William Mostrop, of Tenedale; and in 1429 his name appears in the jury about Elsden church. In 1440, Sir Humphrey Lisle, Knt., gave to William Reed, of Troughend, the hamlet called Bromhope, in Redesdale, in exchange for lands in Buteland and Redesmouth. In 1542, the Reeds of Troughend were reckoned the second clan of the dale in power and reputation, and not long after, in the reign of Queen ELIZABETH, John Reed, "of the land of Troughend," is styled "chief of his name." He appears to have kept up the celebrity of his house by adhering to the habits and cultivating the martial spirit for which the thanes of Redesdale had been immemorially distinguished. He was a man of considerable property, and a commissioner of inclosures in the middle marshes. His descendant, Ellerington Reed, Esq. of Troughend built the present mansion in 1758, which, with the estate, was sold in 1764 by his son, Elrington Reed, Esq., to a gentleman of his name, but no relation whatever, viz., Christopher Reed, Esq. of Chipchase Castle. Ellrington's son, Gabriel Reed, Esq. of Killcalm Kill, died in 1851, much esteemed and respected, leaving a son and successor, the present Ellerington Reed, Esq. of Killcalm Kill, co. Sutherland, representative of the Reeds of Troughend. A scion of the same ancient house was GEORGE REED, Esq.† of Heathpool, co. Northumberland, living in 1743. By his will, which bears date in that year, he leaves a sum of money for the poor of the parish of Kirknewton, and mentions his cousin Ilderton, of Ilderton, then the representative of that most ancient house. His children were,

The Reeds of Old Town were a branch of Troughen.

Lineage.—This family is of Norman origin, and the name of its patriarch appears on the roll of Battle Abbey. Subsequently, it became established in Scotland, where one of its members, GERVASE was a great favourite of DAVID I, who lived in the year 1139. When they migrated from North Britain does not appear; but they were for some years situated at Norham and Twysell-on-the-Tweed, held the custody of the castle at the former place, and in 1314, or shortly previously, WILLIAM DE RIDELL filled the office of sheriff of the co., and was employed on several important occasions during the reign of EDWARD II. The Riddells were afterwards resident in the town of Newcastle-on-Tyne, and there served various municipal offices.

SIR WILLIAM DE RIDELL, sheriff for Northumberland, was appointed by patent, dated 5 June, 1314, from Bishop Kellaw, constable of Norham Castle. From him derived, 9th in descent,

SIR THOMAS RIDELL, Knt. of Gateshead, Durham, M.P. for Newcastle, 1620 and 1628. The 4th son of Sir Thomas was GEORGE, judge advocate in the army of the Marquess of Newcastle during the siege of Hull, in 1645. The 2nd son,

SIR THOMAS RIDELL, Knt. of Fenham, was recorder of and M.P. for Newcastle. During the troubles of the ensuing reign, Sir Thomas espoused with extraordinary zeal the royal cause. He commanded a regt. of foot in the service of the King, was governor of Tynemouth Castle, and so distinguished, that a reward of one thousand pounds was offered for his apprehension. He effected his escape, however, in a small fishing smack from Berwick, and d. at Antwerp, in 1652, "a banished man," his lordship of Tunstal having been previously sold to satisfy his composition. His great-grandson and representative,

THOMAS RIDDELL, Esq. of Swinburne Castle, who was involved in the rising of 1715, saved himself by escaping from Lancaster Castle; but not being excepted from the general pardon, he was allowed to return to his estate and reside there unmolested. He m. in 1726, Mary-Margaret, dau. of William Widdrington, Esq. of Cheeseburne Grange, and sister and co-heir of Ralph Widdrington, Esq., by whom he had (with other issue), THOMAS, his successor, and RALPH, of Cheeseburne Grange (see RIDDELL of Cheeseburne Grange). Lineage.—The first of the Cavers family, who settled there early in the 16th century, was RALPH, 2nd son of THOMAS KER, of Fernieherst (the previous title of the family being Kerslcugh), Ralph's elder brother was SIR ANDREW KER, the celebrated border chieftain, and his younger brother was Thomas Ker, abbot of Kelso. A descendant of the elder brother Sir Andrew, well known as David Ker, was created Lord Jedburgh 1622, and changed the authography of the name to Carre, his son, Sir Andrew Carre, the master of Jedburgh, signing thus, "ACarre."

The Cavers family adopted and have continued the authography of Carre, for independent of the above male relationship with the house of Fernieherst, one of the family m. the Hon. Jane, dau. of James, 2nd Lord Jedburgh (brother of Robert Carre, Earl of Somerset, the favourite of JAMES I of England), and John Carre, of Cavers, the son of that marriage was nephew of Robert, the 3rd Lord Jedburgh, who, dying without issue, the male representation devolved upon the noble family of Lothian as descended from Robert Ker, of Ancram (grandfather of the 1st Earl Ancram), who was a younger son of Sir Andrew or David Ker, the great border chieftain, and nephew of Ralph the first of Cavers.

The Carres of Cavers are also allied by marriage with other noble families, one of their members, Grizzel, m. Patrick Hunce, 1st Earl Maulement, their dau. being the celebrated Lady Grizzel Baillie. The Carres also frequently intermarried with members of the family of Riddell of Riddell, one of the oldest in co. Roxburgh, or in Scotland.

Several members of the family of Carre have rendered good service to their country in military, naval, and legal capacities, and one of them was in several parliaments for the co. Roxburgh.

The present Mr. Riddell-Carre is the son of the late THOMAS RIDDELL, Esq., J.P. co. Roxburgh, and grandson of WILLIAM RIDDELL, Esq. of Camieston, by Elizabeth his wife, dau. of John Carre, Esq. of Cavers Carre.

Lineage.—The Robertsons of Struan, are unquestionably, one of the oldest and most eminent families in Scotland. It has always been the constant and unvarying tradition of the highlanders of Scotland, that they descend from the M'Donalds, Lords of the Isles; recent investigations prove they must derive from the ancient and original Earls of Atholl. The account here given shows that both views of the descent are correct. HENRY, 3rd Earl of Atholl, d. about 1220, and was s. by two co-heiresses,

ANDREW, denominated "DE ATHOLIA" in public and private documents, particularly in the rolls of the Chamberlain of Scotland, where himself, his son, Duncan, and grandson, Robert, all appear under the designation of "De Athollia." He m. the co-heiress of Ewen de Glenerochie and Finnoch, in Strathern, who was son of Conan. Andrew de Atholia was s. by his son,

DUNCAN DE ATHOLIA, Earl of Atholl. From this ancestor of the Robertsons they are known among the highlanders of Scotland as "Clandonachy," or descendants of Duncan. He m. 1st, a dau. of Malcolm, Earl of Lennox, and had a son, I. ROBERT DE ATHOLIA, ancestor of the STRUAN family. Duncan, by his 2nd wife, presumed to have been a dau. of Angus More, Lord of the Isles, had a son, II. PATRICK DE ATHOLIA, who received from his father the barony of Lude, ancestor of the great Scottish family of ROBERTSON of Lude, now represented by Lieut.-Col. JAMES-ALEXANDER ROBERTSON, of the 82nd regt., who is son and heir of the late Lieut Gen. William Robertson, of Lude, by Margaret, his wife, eldest dau. of George Haldane, Esq. of Glenagles, co. Perth, and present male heir of ROBERTSON of Lude. A younger branch of the Lude family were the ROBERTSONS of Tullybelton, co. Perth, represented by ROBERT-HENRY ROBERSTON, Esq. of Tullybelton.

ROBERT DE ATHOLIA (the eldest son of Duncan de Atholia) had by his first wife (dau. and co-hier of Sir John Stirling, of Glenuik) a dau. Jean, m. to Alexander Menzies, of Fothergill. By his second wife he had a son,

DUNCAN, mentioned in the Rotuli Scotiæ under the name of Duncanus de Atholia, dominus de Ranagh. He was s. by his son,

ROBERT, one of the most noted chiefs of his day. He arrested the murderers of JAMES I, and for this good service received a crown charter, erecting his whole lands into a free barony, dated in 1451, and also an honourable augmentation to his arms. He m. the Lady Margaret Stewart, by whom he had three sons,

At the breaking out of the rebellion of 1641, we find the disposition made by the brothers for the maintenance of the remaining family property, to be as follows:—George and Ulick were settled at Glynn; John, at Tourin; and David, on the Cork estates. The brothers were all present at the several conflicts of Cappoquin, Knockmourne, Mothill, Lismore, and Dungarvon, and at all these showed themselves devoted adherents of the Stewarts, which drew upon them the hostility of the lord protector, and eventually their attainder by the English Parliament. Two only, George and John, survived these disasters. They withdrew in exile to Flan ders, where they found their prince, for whom they had undergone so much, also a fugitive and wanderer. It is recorded of them that, along with their kinsman, Maurice, Lord Roch and Fermoy (also attainted), they shared their military pay with CHARLES, served which that monarch wholly overlooked at the period of his restoration. George Roch d. of his wounds, in exile, about the year 1658, and bequeathed to his brother's care his only son,

JAMES ROCH, col. in King WILLIAM'S army at the relief of Derry, b. at Kinsale, 29 Sept. 1658. In the Williamite army he soon attained the rank of col., and at the memorable siege of Derry distinguished himself by his almost Roman heroism. When Kirke, the gen. sent to the relief of the beleagured town, arrived off Lough Foyle, he found a strong boom or barricade, stretched across the harbour's mouth, so as effectually to preclude the passage of his ships. In despair, he would have sailed away without any communication with the defenders of Derry, when Col. Roch offered to swim to the town, bearing despatches. He did so, having attached bullets to the letters, that he might sink them in the event of his own capture, and returned to his companions; but having been repeatedly fired upon by the Irish troops who lined the banks, his jawbone was broken, and three muskets balls were lodged in different parts of his body. For this heroic feat he was, during the remainder of his life, honourably called "the Swimmer," and he received from the King the more substantial reward of certain ferries of Ireland, along with fifteen of the forfeited estates. The latter were lost to him by the Act of Resumption, and parliament in lieu, voted him a sum of money. Col. Roch m. 1st, in 1693, Elizabeth Gough, dau. of the bishop of Limerick, and had issue, a son and dau., who were named after the King and Queen, and had the honour of having their Majesties for sponsors,

Lineage.—A celebrity has been given to the romantic beauties of "Rokeby," by Sir Walter Scott. Few persons visit the neighbourhood without observing with what extreme accuracy of observation and felicity of expression the bard has described the passage through the glen :—

> "A stern and lone, yet lovely road,
> As e'er the foot of minstrel strode;"

or view "Egliston's grey ruins," or "Rokeby's turrets high," without feeling that the charm of poetry is thrown over them.

At the period of the CONQUEST, all the territory abutting on the Tees, at their southern border, was granted to Alan, Earl of Bretagne, and formed his English Earldom of Richmond. These broad lands were partitioned among the junior members of his family and his followers, and, in the distribution, Rokeby became part of the possessions of the Fitz Alans, a northern baronial house, whose chief seat was at Bedale. But their interest at Rokeby was scarcely more than nominal, for beneath them was a subinfeudation, in favour of a family which, residing on the lands of Rokeby, was usually described as "De Rokeby," and eventually assumed that name as a personal appellative. Tradition asserts that the family had been seated on these lands in Saxon times, but it first appeared prominent in public affairs in the person of THOMAS DE ROKEBY, whose rise in royal favour is circumstantially related by Froissart. In the 14th century, lived the gallant Sir Thomas Rokeby, who took so prominent a part in the Battle of Neville's Cross, and became afterwards lord justice of Ireland; in which country, in two centuries after, WILLIAM ROKEBY was lord chancellor and archbishop of Dublin. The eldest branch of the family resided at Rokeby and Morthan. Its chief, temp. HENRY VII, was

SIR THOMAS ROKEBY, who had three sons; the two younger were the ancestors of families of the name, resident at Marske and Stainigford. The eldest son,

THOMAS ROKEBY, Esq., m. Katherine Leigh, and had issue, WILLIAM, his heir; Ralph; Elizabeth, m. to Richard Vincent, of Frisby; and Susan, m. to William Cartwright, of Normandy. The elder son,

WILLIAM ROKEBY, Esq. of Hotham, in Yorkshire, aged 28 in 1584, m. Dorothy, dau. of William Rokeby, Esq. of Skiers, and had four sons and one dau. viz., I. WILLIAM, of Skiers, created a baronet 29 Jan. 1660-1. His issue is extinct. II. Alexander, who m. Susan, dau. of Gervase Bosville, Esq. of Edlington, and had issue. III. THOMAS, of whom presently. HUGH ROSE, of Geddes, by marriage with the heiress of the Bysets, acquired the lands of Kilravock, and had a crown charter of the barony from King JOHN (Balliol). From that period the estate has descended lineally to the present proprietor; and what is uncommon, every link of the pedigree is proved by documents among the public records, or in the family charter chest. In 1460, Hugh Rose, then of Kilravock, by a licence from the Lord of the Isles, built the present castle, which stands on the bank of the river Nairne. The baron of Kilravock, in 1560, used a seal of the family arms, with the inscription, S. Hugonis roe Baronis—a style very unusual in Scotland, but which seems to have been adopted by many of the lairds of Kilravock. The representative of the family in the 15th century,

Lineage.—The family of Roggyll, Ruggle, and Ruggles, the name being variously spelt, is found to be of ancient standing in the county of Suffolk; but whether it was a branch of the family of Rugeley, of Staffordshire, is uncertain. The celebrated GEORGE RUGGLES, son of Thomas Ruggles, of Lavenham, was of this house, and he wrote the comedy of Ignoramus, which was acted before King JAMES I, in 1614. RUSSELL OF KILLOUGH.

RUSSELL, THOMAS-JOHN, Esq. of Quoniamstown and Ballystrew, co. Down, representative of the Barons of Killough, s. his father 1840; m. 1st, 1822, Marie-Christine, 2nd dau. of the Marquis de St. Gery, by his wife, a dau. of the late Count de M'Carthy, of Toulouse; and 2ndly, 1833, Marie-Josephine-Aglaë-Ferdinande, only dau. of the late Marquis de Flamarens, by his wife, Marie-Christine de Riquet de Caraman, whose father was 2nd brother to the head of the family of Caraman, now Duc de Caraman, in France, and Princes de Chimay, in Belgium. The late Marquis de Flamarens, lord of the bedchamber to CHARLES X, was sole heir and representative of the house of GROS-SOLLES-FLAMARENS, one of the most illustrious among the old French nobility, claiming alliance with most of the sovereign houses of Europe. By his 2nd wife, Mr. Russell has issue,

I. HENRY-PATRICK-MARIE, a distinguished traveller, b. 14 Feb. 1834.
II. Charles-Francis-Marie, capt. in the service of His Holiness the Pope, b. 1 April, 1836.
III. Ferdinand-Marie, lieut. 49th regiment, British service, b. 12 Feb. 1841.
I. Christine-Prosperio-Marie.

By letters patent, dated 22 Aug. 1862, the title of Count was conferred by Pope Pius IX on Thomas-John Russell, Esq. of Killough, and his issue male.

Lineage.—On the roll of Battle Abbey, among the distinguished individuals who accompanied WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR to England, is to be found the name of RUSSELL; and from that remote period the Russells of Kingston Russell, and subsequently of Woburn, have acted a prominent part in the annals of England. The present representative of this illustrious race is the DUKE OF BEDFORD. The ancestor of the Irish Russells of Killough, Rathmullen, Quoniamstown, and Ballystrew, co. Down, and the junior branches of Drynam and Seatown, co. Dublin, are descended from a cadet of the house of Kingston-Russell, who accompanied De Courcy in the conquest of the earldom of Ulster, from whom he received a grant of the lordships of Killough and Rathmullen, with cognizance of such pleas as constituted the possessor "unus baronum libertatis comitatis Ultonia," in which capacity he signed, with the Bishop of Down and Connor and the abbots, priors, and other ecclesiastical barons of Ulster, the letter to King HENRY IV, which is to be found among the proofs of this pedigree.

THOMAS RUSSELL was Baron of Killough, co. Down, in 1316, and is supposed to have been 5th in descent from the companion of De Courcy. He had two sons, of whom the eldest,

JACOB RUSSELL, Baron of Killough and of Rathmollen, m. Maria, dau. of the chief of the family of Magennis, subsequently Lords Iveagh, and had issue. The 2nd son, RICHARD RUSSELL, was created Grand Justiciary of Ulster, by letters patent of King RICHARD II anno 1385, and Chancellor of the same province in 1388. The eldest son,

JACOB RUSSELL, 3rd Baron of Killough, m. Rohesia MacCartan, and was s. by his son,

GEORGE RUSSELL, Baron of Killough and Rathmollen, who m. Catherine, dau. of Hugh-Boy O'Neill, of Clanebuy, of the royal house of O'Neill, which circumstance did not prevent the Baron of Killough from signing, with the Bishop of Down and Connor, the Abbot of Bangor, and the other ecclesiastical barons of Ulster, a very curious petition to King HENRY IV, claiming aid and assistance against the invasions of the Scots of the outer Isles, and other enemies of the king's power; and among these enemies the petition contains the name of the O'Neills, the Magennis, and the MacCartans, all nearly related to the family of Russell. An authenticated copy of this petition, which was signed by George Russell alone, of all the lay barons of Ulster, is among the records of the Herald's office at Dublin. George Russell was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM RUSSELL, Baron of Killough and Rathmullen, who m. Anne, dau. of Alexander-Mor MacDonnell, of the family of the Earls of Antrim. By this marriage he had,

JOHN RUSSELL, Baron of Killough in 1490, who m. Johanna, dau. of Robert Savage, styled Dominus, or Lord of the manor of Archeen, and was father of

HENRY RUSSELL, Baron of Killough, &c., who m. Judith, dau. and heir of Carbery MacCann, of Mointnaugh, and was s. by his eldest son,

JAMES RUSSELL, Baron of Killough, who m. Mary, dau. of Rowland Savage, of Portaferry, head of one of the most ancient families of Ulster, still seated at Portaferry, and had by her,

GEORGE RUSSELL, Baron of Killough, &c., who m. Elinor, dau. of Richard Fleming, of the illustrious house of Slane, and was s. by his son,

NICHOLAS RUSSELL, Baron of Killough, who, during the lifetime, and with the consent of his only son, PATRICK RUSSELL, last of the name styled Baron of Killough, and who d. without issue, sold his estate of Killough to his 2nd brother,

GEORGE RUSSELL, Esq. of Sheep House, in the co. Meath, and also of Killough, co. Down, in consequence of the purchase of that old family inheritance from his brother, and of the death of his nephew. His son,

GEORGE RUSSELL, of Sheep House and Killough, m. Mary, dau. of Arthur Magennis, brother to the Lord Iveagh, and their eldest son,

RICHARD RUSSELL, of Sheep House and Killough, had by his wife, Jane, dau. of Hugh Dowdall, Esq., a son,

WILLIAM RUSSELL, of Sheep House and Killough, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Hussey, Baron of Galtrim, co. Meath, and their eldest son, called also

WILLIAM RUSSELL, of Sheep House and Killough, m. Elizabeth, dau. of Robert Hely, Esq. of Drogheda, but dying s. p. was s. by his brother,

THOMAS RUSSELL, who m. Catherine, dau. of Peter Clinton, Esq., named in the Russell pedigree, as belonging to the baronial house of Clinton, in England, now represented by the Duke of Newcastle, and by her left a numerous family of sons, of whom two were killed fighting for the cause of the Stuarts; one at Aughrim, and the other, Andrew Russell, capt. in Lord Bellew's regiment at the battle of the Boyne. Another member of this branch held a diplomatic appointment in Portugal, under JAMES II. Thomas Russell's 2nd son,

JOHN RUSSELL, Esq. of Sheep House and Killough, m. Anne, dau. of William Gardiner, Esq. of Dublin, and had two sons, who d. without issue. By the extinction of this 2nd branch of the Killough family, the RUSSELLS Quoniamstown and Ballystrew (a property forming part and parcel of the barony of Killough) became the representatives of the Russells of Ulster, barons of Killough. The founder of this branch, now presumed to be the only one remaining of this ancient family, was

JAMES RUSSELL, of Quoniamstown and Ballystrew, 3rd son of George, 9th baron of Killough, by his wife, Elinor Fleming, of Slane. He d. in 1605, leaving by his wife, whose name does not appear on the records, so imperfectly kept in those times of mistrust and civil commotion,

GEORGE RUSSELL, of Quoniamstown, Ballystrew, and Killough, who d. in 1645, leaving by his wife, Margaret, a son and heir,

PATRICK RUSSELL, who m. Maria, dau. of Cahill O'Hara, Esq. of Crebilly, co. Antrim, and had an eldest son,

PATRICK RUSSELL, who m. Alicia Hussey, of the family of the barons of Galtrim, co. Meath, and by her was father of VALENTINE RUSSELL, whose 1st wife was of the family of O'Hanlon, styled "Princely" in the original pedigree; his 2nd wife was of the illustrious house of Magennis, Lords Iveagh; by her he left a large family of daus. By his 1st wife he had a son,

PATRICK RUSSELL, who m. Mary, dau. of John Crilly, Esq. of Kilcurry, co. Louth, and had issue, a son and heir,

PATRICK RUSSELL, who m. Christina, dau. of Admiral Tyrrell, but leaving no issue, was s. by his brother,

THOMAS RUSSELL, who became representative of the Russells of Ulster, barons of Killough. He m. Margaret, dau. of John Byrne, Esq. of Castletown, co. Louth, by whom he had,

PATRICK-HENRY RUSSELL, Esq. of Killough, Quoniamstown, and Ballystrew, co. Down, and of Ballinfull, co.

Lineage.—The traditional account of the origin of this ancient family is, that a man of distinction on the borders having conducted RUTHER, King of the Scots, safely through the river Tweed, on an expedition against the Britons, at a place, from that event, called Rutherford, the king, after the expedition was over, bestowed some lands contiguous thereto upon his faithful conductor, from which his posterity assumed the name of Rutherfurd as soon as surnames became hereditary in Scotland. Be this as it may, certain it is the family of Rutherfurd, of that ilk, from which several other considerable families of that surname in the south of Scotland are descended, have always been classed amongst the most ancient and powerful families in Teviotdale.

Among the earliest records of the name of Rutherford are to be found ROBERTUS DOMINUS DE RUTHERFORD, witness to a charter granted by DAVID I to Gervasius Ridal 1140, and a Rutherford or Rordesforde in the charter of William the Lion 1165. During the period from 1165 to 1249 occur the names of GREGORY and NICHOLAS RETHERFORD. SIR ROBERT RUTHERFORD the friend of Robert Bruce is mentioned in Barbour's history of that prince In 1398 SIR RICHARD RUTHERFORD, of that ilk, was ambassador to the court of England, and in 1400 was one of the wardens of the Marches. By his wife, Jane Douglas, he had three sons, James, who s. him, had a charter of the lands of Lethbertshiels and others; John, ancestor of the family of Hunthill, who eventually enjoyed the honours and titles of Lord Rutherford and Earl of Teviot; and Nichol, who obtained charters of the lands of Mackerston and others, and was ancestor of the Rutherfords of Himdole. James and Nichol were appointed guarantees of a treaty with the English 1449.

JAMES RUTHERFORD, son of the last-mentioned James, obtained in 1457, a charter of lands to him and his spouse, Margaret Erskine, dau. of Lord Erskine. He had a grant from JAMES IV of the lands of Edgerston in 1492, and shortly after of the lands of Rutherford and Wells. By his said wife, he had two sons, PHILIP and Thomas. The elder son,

PHILIP RUTHERFORD, m. Elizabeth, dau. of Walter Ker, of Cessford, ancestor of the Dukes of Roxburghe, and had with a son, Richard, who d. s. p.; two daus., the elder, Helen, m. twice, and d. s. p.; the younger, Christian, m. James Stuart, ancestor to the Earls of Traquair, and through her the estates of Rutherford and Wells passed to the family of Stewart, and the Earls of Traquair, in right of this marriage, quartered the arms of Rutherford with their own. On the death of the above Richard without issue the lands and barony of Edgerston descended to his uncle, Thomas, heir male of the family, and his son, Robert, obtained a confirmation of the same under the great seal 1559. This Robert was s by his son,

THOMAS RUTHERFORD, commonly called the black laird of Rutherford and renowned for the exploits of himself and his nine sons on the borders. His son,

RICHARD RUTHERFORD, of that ilk, m. the granddau. of the laird of Buccleugh, and had a son,

ROBERT RUTHERFORD, who m. Margaret, Riddell, dau. of the baron of that ilk, and had a son,

I. ANDREW, s. to the estates in 1686; and d. s. p. 1718.
II. THOMAS, successor to his brother.
III. Robert, became Rutherford of Bowland, and was ancestor of Sir Walter Scott, Bart., the author of "Waverley."

The 2nd surviving son,

THOMAS RUTHERFORD, on the death of his brother Andrew, s. p. in 1718, became known as Rutherford of that ilk, of Edgerston and Wells, acquired the lands of Bonjedward and Mounthooly, together with the lands of Hunthill and Scraisburgh, from Robert, Lord Rutherfurd, who likewise assigned to Thomas (with the estate) the title of Lord Rutherfurd, in like manner as it had been assigned to his brothers and to him by the Earl of Teviot, by virtue of the patent, which was the only right they had. But Thomas esteeming a Scots' peerage rather a loss than an advantage, contented himself with assigning it in like manner to his son and successor, who likewise declined claiming it. It was, however, assumed by Capt. John Rutherfurd, collateral heir male, descended from Richard Rutherfurd, of Littlehaugh, and since by others. He m. Susanna, dau. and heiress of Riddell, of Minto, and had issue (with five daus.) one son,

SIR JOHN RUTHERFURD, of that ilk, who s. his father in 1720. He m. 1710, Elizabeth Cairncross, heiress of the ancient and

DE RYTHRE, WILLIAM, Esq. of Riverstown House, co. Kildare, A.M., J.P., m. Blanche-Madina, youngest dau. of Richard Waller, Esq. of Castle Waller, co. Tipperary, and sister of Lady De Burgho.

Lineage.—HUBERT DE RIE, DE RYE, OF DE RYTHRE (under which name his grandson, Walter, received a grant of the lordship of Rythre, in Yorkshire), a Norman noble, arrived in England on an embassy of much historical interest, the succession to the crown, to WILLIAM OF NORMANDY from EDWARD THE CONFESSOR. Having conducted the negotiations to a final issue, he returned to Normandy, and exhibited to the duke the memorials in virtue of which King EDWARD had acknowledged him as his successor. Subsequently he accompanied the CONQUEROR on his invasion of England, and participated in the victory of Hastings. The descendants of the Walter de Rythre to whom allusion has been made, as the grandson of Hubert de Rye, enjoyed in lineal succession the dignity of barons by tenure, until the 29 Dec. 1299, when William, Lord de Rythre became a peer by writ of summons. On the intermarriage of Sir William de Rythre, of de Rythre Castle, with Sybilla, dau. and co-heir of William, Lord Aldeburgh, of Harewood Castle, Yorkshire, that historic edifice became the principal residence of the De Rythre family.
